Franklin B. Sanborn (b. 1831) was reformer, editor, and author; he served as chairman of the Mass. State Board of Charities, secretary of the American Social Science Association, and investigator of the Mass. lunacy system. Because of this interest in insanity, Pliny Earle wrote him a review of the reliability of statistics on the "curability" of insanity in 1875.

Sanders Family. Papers. Walterboro,
Colleton Co., S.C.

These papers are primarily those of Derrill, Burrell, and Benjamin K. Sanders and their immediate families, who were small plantation owners in Colleton County, South Carolina. The correspondence is both personal and business in nature. Personal letters are generally between relatives, while many of the business letters are from various cotton factors in Charleston. Early financial papers are primarily household and plantation accounts, but there are several receipts for the sale of slaves. Later financial papers are mostly tax receipts. Legal papers in the collection consist of wills, deeds, and records of lawsuits, usually for nonpayment of debts. Of the three volumes in this collection, one marked "Pass Book" contains a list of slaves and their prices. Other pages of this book are an "Account of Lost time for the year 1866," and is a record of days missed and wages lost by Negro workers.

Sanders Family

Sandford, William. Papers, 1833-1914. Bath,
Somersetshire, England

William Sandford (d. 1871) of Bath, England, was the son of William Sandford (d. 1821), a merchant at Manchester. His brother was the Rev. George Benjamin Sandford (1811-1852). See Jeremiah F. Smith, ed., The Admission Register of the Manchester School . . . (Manchester, 1866-1874), III, 169-170. The younger William Sandford was a close friend of John Paget (1808-1892) and was his companion on the journey of 1835-1836 that was described in Paget's Hungary and Transylvania . . . (London, 1839). See

Sandford, William

Volume I, pp. 1 and 3, of the edition of 1850 and also Sandford's manuscript letters of Aug. 2, 1836, and 1848.

The collection represents his association with Hungarian exiles after the failure of the revolt of 1848-1849, and the correspondence of 1846-1866 includes one to five letters each from a number of illustrious Hungarians. Lajos Kossuth, John Paget, and Count László Teleki were noted frequently. Polish affairs also received considerable comment during 1848-1863, and Italian politics were noted occasionally in the 1850's and 1860's.

A second major topic of the collection was the development of cotton culture in the Ottoman Empire during 1860-1867. Sandford's efforts won him a gold medal from the Turkish government in 1866. He wrote several books and articles about the cultivation of American cotton, the New Orleans variety, in Turkey and about problems of the cotton trade between that country and Great Britain. He was probably involved with the Manchester Cotton Supply Association that was formed in 1857 by British manufacturers who wanted to lessen their dependence on American cotton by diversifying its production. His related correspondence with the Foreign Office is cited in W. O. Henderson, The Lancashire Cotton Famine, 1861-1865 (Manchester, 1934), p. 154.

British politics, and foreign relations with France, Russia, Austria, and Turkey are also represented by correspondence during the 1830's to the 1860's.

A selective index has been compiled of most, but not necessarily all, of the references to persons, places, and topics that are mentioned in this collection. The index is in the Inventory File. A list of known correspondents is bound with the index, and their letters are itemized in the Autograph File. Several signatures could not be identified.

The letters were originally bound into a scrapbook from which many of the labels have survived. A number of labels represent manuscripts that are no longer with the papers, and they are filed together in a folder.

There are 183 manuscripts most of which are letters addressed to Sandford.

Sanford, Charles Addison. Papers, 1865.
Washington, D. C. and Ann Arbor, Washtenaw Co.,

Two facsimiles of personal letters written from Washington, D. C., in Apr., 1865, by Charles Addison Sanford, a U. S. soldier, to his University of Mich. classmate Edward Payson Goodrich. Both letters were reproduced and first published as Bulletin 47 of the Clements Library University of Mich., Ann Arbor, Mich., on Feb. 12, 1946.

The letters deal principally with the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln by John Wilkes Booth in Ford's Theatre, in Washington, on Apr. 14, 1865; the President's death the following day; and the mourning in the Nation's Capital.

Secretary of State William Henry Seward was also attacked. Sanford quotes ~~him~~ a letter sent to him by Goodrich which tells that Lincoln had recently been happy over the successes of Union arms. The city of Washington, likewise, had lately been enthusiastic and had had a big celebration. Now, in contrast, Washington was in mourning with black crepe on many buildings. The Negroes, who idolized the late President, line the sidewalk in front of the White House.

The President lies in State in the White House while many including Sanford, come to see him. The White House, Ford's Theatre, and other buildings are in mourning. A startling amount of grief is displayed by people in the streets. A $30,000 reward has been offered for the arrest of Booth. C. S. Gen. William Henry Fitzhugh Payne, as a prisoner of war, was being conducted through the streets of Washington when the crowd, thinking he was Booth, became clamorous.

Persons mentioned include Gen. George Armstrong Custer; his brother, Capt. Thomas Ward Custer; and Gen. U. S. Grant.

Other subjects mentioned include the University of Mich., Yale University, and Union and Confederate casualties.

Sanford's niece wrote in 1858 giving a rather interesting account of the section of Kentucky, the vicinity of Flemingsburg, where she had recently settled. Apparently, judging from one letter, Sanford had a son who taught in an academy at Penfield, Ga.

Sanford's papers as clerk of court are concerned with requests for informa-

There are also a number of bills and receipts.

U. S. Army Surgeon serving with the First Division under Maj. Gen. W. J. Worth (1794-1849). Dr. Satterlee became major surgeon in 1832 and was chief medical purveyor for the Union Army in the Civil War. He died on Nov. 10, 1880, with the rank of General in the regular army. During the Mexican War Capt. Philip Kearney (1815-1862) was in command of a cavalry company "magnificently equipped," which served as Gen. Scott's body guard. He took over two horses which Dr. Satter-

Saunders, Sir Charles Burslem. Papers, 1853-1934. London, England

Sir Charles Burslem Saunders, a British administrator in India, was located at Hyderabad in 1860 when he was appointed a judicial commissioner at Mysore. By 1869 he was back in Hyderabad where Whitaker's Almanack listed him as the British resident in 1875. During 1876-1878 he was the chief commissioner in Mysore. A small group of letters from several governors general and viceroys of India concern the administration of Hyderabad and Mysore in the 1870's and other matters. In 1861 Saunders' family lived in London, which is given as the geographic location of the collection. Possibly if more biographical information becomes available, it will be learned that such a location should be elsewhere than London.

Saunders, Sir Charles Burslem

There are two letters from Lord Dalhousie, Governor General of India, to Charles A. Saunders. On May 14, 1853, Dalhousie discussed appointments for two sons of Saunders and commented apparently about railroad construction, the first line having been opened in April. In 1854, one of the sons died, and the Governor General expressed sympathy and commented on the career of the surviving brother. The obituary of Harry C. Saunders, aged 24, of the Bengal Civil Service, second son of Charles A. Saunders of Westbourne Lodge, appears in The Gentleman's Magazine, Vol. 42 (July-Dec., 1854), p. 408. Charles B. Saunders may be the eldest son.

On Dec. 20, 1860, Governor General Canning wrote to Charles B. Saunders at Hyderabad about his appointment as judicial commissioner at Mysore and about a possible knighthood.

On March 4, 1861, John Lawrence wrote from London, asked consideration of Lieut. Hudleston for office, and commented on the state of India, his life in England, and his and Saunders' families. At this time C.B. Saunders was in Mysore. In 1869 he was back in Hyderabad, and Lawrence, now the Viceroy, discussed his own health and plans to return to England and sent greetings to Sir Salar Jung, a high official (Letter of Jan. 15, 1869).

On Oct. 28, 1873, the Governor General, Lord Northbrook, discussed appointments to the judiciary of Berar and asked about Sir Salar Jung's opinion of this or related matters.

In 1875, the Nizam of Hyderabad was a minor, and the state was ruled by a regency headed by Sir Salar Jung. On Aug. 19 Lord Northbrook instructed Saunders about dealing with Jung and the other ministers who opposed a visit by the Nizam to the Prince of Wales at Bombay. For this purpose Saunders was to receive a letter from Charles Aitchison, the foreign secretary. On Nov. 5 Northbrook replied to concern for the safety of the Prince of Wales should he visit the caves of Ellora. On Jan. 8, 1876, John Lawrence returned Saunders' correspondence with Salar Jung and expressed sorrow at its causes. Their correspondence was published and is listed under Saunders' name in the British Museum Catalogue. Whitaker's Almanack for 1875 listed him as the British resident at Hyderabad.

During 1876-1878 Saunders was the chief commissioner in Mysore; see Rajakaryaprasakta Shama Rao, Modern Mysore (Bangalore, 1936), Vol. II, pp. 23-25. The government of India was pledged to restore the rule of Mysore to the Maharaja and did so in 1881. On June 8, 1776, the Viceroy, Lord Lytton, welcomed Saunders to his new office and discussed at length (15pp.) the administrative preparations for the transfer of power.

On Sept. 15, 1884, the Governor General, Lord Ripon, noted the defeat of the tribes that had attacked villages near Agra [?] and left Saunders free to use available reinforcements for the security of the frontier.

On May 23, 1893, Lord Ripon, the colonial secretary, agreed to meet Rai Bahadur Ram Singh.

Saunders, Sir Charles Burslem

A clipping is the obituary in 1934 of the Dowager Maharani of Mysore to whose husband the British returned the rule of the state in 1881.

Hubert S. Saunders served aboard the gunboat Peosta, a paddle steamer of 233 tons and fourteen guns. Although this gunboat is listed as built in 1863-4, Saunders writes his first letter from the Peosta on Oct. 23, 1862. He had served in Va. on the James River earlier in that year. Hubert Saunders writes to his mother, father, and brother Frank, giving an account of life aboard the gunboats of the Mississippi Squadron. His boat served on the Tennessee River, running from Cairo, Ill., to to Florence, Ala., although most of its activity revolved around the Union base at Paducah, Ky. Frequent mention is made of Admiral David Porter. Like most Civil War soldiers and sailors, Saunders was concerned with food, clothing, and supplies. Life in Paducah is complicated by drunken, roistering service men and by the Confederate attack on the fort there on Mar. 25, 1864. The Peosta took part in the defense of Paducah. Skirmishing with Confederate troops along the Tennessee River is accompanied by trading with the farm women who want coffee,

Sannders, Hubert

sugar, and salt. By 1864 the Peosta begins to hunt down guerillas and often joins U. S. Cavalry units in this work. Hubert Saunders describes the capture of Ft. Pillow in letters of April 19 and 25, 1864. He frequently referred to the raids of General Nathan Bedford Forrest or to anticipation of such raids. Comment is made on the election and assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Notes on the fighting in Tennessee between Generals George Thomas and John B. Hood appear in the letters of December, 1864. The concluding letters picture the end of the war for the gunboats. The Peosta was sold in August, 1865.

Saunders, Ivory Bassett. Papers, 1845-1876.
Wayne, Erie Co., Pa.

Mostly letters about personal affairs and the Civil War in Va. relating to Ivory Bassett Saunders, and William A. Saunders, who seems to have been his grandson. An Ivory Saunders was a U. S. Army soldier during the Civil War. His father was Stephen Saunders. U. S. Army camp life is discussed on Mar. 9, 1862 and in other letters. Bad discipline is reported, also.

A student in Oberlin College in 1861 describes conditions and Negroes there.

The Battle of Winchester is discussed on Apr. 14, 1862. The U. S. and Confed. casualties are vividly described.

Three letters of 1873 are by William A. Saunders from the U. S. Military Academy where he describes cadet life.

Saunders did not graduate with the Class of 1876, but he received a letter from a class-mate who did, Lt. (later Gen.) Henry Hunt

SAUNDERS, Romulus Mitchell. Letters. 1833-
1866. Raleigh, N. C. Sketch. 64 pieces.

[See D. A. B., XVI, 382f.] Saunders (1791-1867) was educated at the University of N. C., studied law, and settled at Milton, N. C. He served in the N. C. state legislature, in Congress, became attorney-general of N. C., and later judge of the superior court.

In 1846 President Polk made him minister to Spain, with the idea of negotiating for the purchase of Cuba. Saunders' diplomatic career was not especially successful, since the Cuban purchase did not materialize, and he quarreled with his secretary, Thomas Cante Reynolds. Saunders apparently stayed in Paris and other places distant from the legation, leaving the burden of the work on Reynolds and then criticizing him when he assumed any responsibility. Saunders resigned May 1, 1849, and returned to Raleigh.

The letters refer to this dispute, to family matters, and to some public questions.

C., replies to this on Nov. 26, 1864, telling her of the problems which would be involved in attempting to meet her requests and suggesting that the ladies would do much to help the soldiers if they would only continue to visit them.

William Saunders (1743-1817) English physician and chemist, writes a brief note to which is attached a biographical sketch and a list of his publications. His "Account of a new Extract of Bark prepared in South America" was sent by Saunders in a letter to Dr. Simmons on Feb. 11, 1790. The account was later published in the Universal Asylum and Columbia Magazine (Dec. 1790 p. 358). James Iredell copied Dr. Simmons' letter from Dr. Saunders, and it is preserved among the Jas. Saunders, William Laurence. Papers, 1792-1905.
Raleigh, N. C. 381 items and 3 vols. Sketch.

Papers of the Saunders family, particularly those of ^{the} Reverend Joseph Hubbard Saunders (1800-1839). ~~The~~ Reverend Joseph Saunders, of Chowan County, N. C., graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1821, and tutored there until 1825. He preached from various Episcopal pulpits in eastern North Carolina and taught at the Episcopal School in Raleigh until 1836, when he moved to Pensacola, Florida, and died there in a yellow fever epidemic in 1839. His son, William L. Saunders, the editor and historian,

Saunders, William Laurence

was born in Raleigh in 1835 and graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1854, receiving his LL.B. there in 1858. During the Civil War he rose to the rank of Colonel of the 46th North Carolina Regiment, and was twice wounded. After the war, he was an associate editor of the Wilmington Journal, Clerk of the Senate, 1870-74, and co-founder of the Raleigh Observer in 1876. Saunders was a trustee of the University of North Carolina from 1875 until his death in 1891, serving as Secretary-Treasurer of the Board of Trustees from 1879 on. He was

Secretary of State from 1879 until his death, and editor and compiler of the Colonial Records of North Carolina, which appeared in ten volumes between 1886 and 1890.

The bulk of the material in this collection is relatively unimportant personal, legal, and financial papers of three generations of the Saunders family. There is also a body of genealogical materials, especially on the Saunders and Baker families (Laura Baker was the wife of Joseph Saunders), some material relating to the history of the University of North Carolina, and a group of Joseph Saunders' sermons, and papers concerned with the Episcopal School in Raleigh.

The early papers of the collection contain indentures for land purchases on Nov. 8, 1792 in the Chapel Hill area. There are financial and legal papers pertaining to the estate and activities of James Saunders, grandfather of William L. Saunders. One item of interest among the early papers is a diploma from the Philanthropic Society of the University of North Carolina for Joseph H. Saunders in 1821.

One of the infrequent letters of general interest in the collection comes to Joseph Saunders from his cousin, Ann Freeman, on December 5, 18-25. She tells about John Davis Hawkins' attack in the Raleigh Star and North Carolina State Gazette on Bishop John Stark Ravenscroft because of a controversy over a purchase of slaves.

A letter to Joseph Saunders from Richard Benbury Creecy on April 4, 1832, comments that a large number of people would be on hand for commencement in Chapel Hill, perhaps because Judge William Gaston was to deliver the Annual

Oration. A letter from Creecy on November 3, 1832, discusses a projected new building for the Philanthropic Society at Chapel Hill, supported by Judges Frederick Nash and William Gaston, among others. Another letter from Creecy on Nov. 10, 1832, comments on the financial troubles of the Protestant Episcopal Press, and on the resignation of Bishop Philander Chase in the Kenyon College controversy.

On Dec. 17, 1835, Laura Saunders writes to her father, Dr. Simmons Baker, a letter full of news about contemporary events in N. C. She comments on the election of Richard Dobbs

Spaight, Jr., to the governorship and the appointment of David Lowry Swain as president of the University. She notes that, because of his nullification views, John L. Bailey of Elizabeth City did not get the judgeship vacated by the death of Judge Henry Seawell, and that the menacing state of affairs between the U. S. and France has stopped the sale of cotton in Norfolk and Petersburg. She closes with a comment that her cousin "admires Yankey manners and habits exceedingly."

On January 5, 1836, Joseph Saunders recounts

Saunders, William Laurence

in a letter to his father-in-law, Dr. Simmons Baker, the struggle between the faculty of the Episcopal School in Raleigh and the rector, Joseph Green Cogswell. Saunders also discusses the plans maturing in Raleigh to create financial backing for the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad Company, and mentions the activities of Judge [Duncan?], Cameron on this project. He passes on the news he has heard of the European travels of Bishop Levi Silliman Ives, and notes that General Romulus Saunders is rumored to be the next Minister to Spain. Other letters from Saunders

to Baker in 1836 discuss the move of the Saunders family to Pensacola.

The Reverend Joseph Saunders writes his wife from a church convention in Philadelphia on September 15, 1838, recounting how he was suggested for the post of Missionary Bishop in Arkansas by Bishop Ives, but that he declined the offer and suggested Leonidas Polk, who was subsequently elected.

The material from the 1840's through the mid-1860's consists completely of unimportant family correspondence and papers. In October 1865, a

Letter from one of Simmons Baker's daughters begins with a sketch of Baker's life and ends in a tirade against Yankee education and Yankees in general. A letter of September 28, 1868, to William L. Saunders from E. Graham Haywood asks Saunders to join the "Order of Union Democracy" that is currently being organized to support the Seymour-Blair ticket. Thomas Bragg, Daniel G. Fowle, and Seaton Gales are among the organization's leaders in North Carolina.

The papers of the 1870's and 1880's, in the main, deal with the genealogical studies being undertaken by William L. Saunders and with material incidental to the administration of the University of North Carolina. On May 2, 1871, Edward T. Underhill comments in a letter to Saunders that he wishes Saunders' brother-in-law, Joseph A. Englehard, the editor of the Wilmington Journal, would change his politics. On January 16, 1878, George Davis, the former Attorney-General of the Confederacy, writes to Saunders in a somber mood, stating his outlook on his life and the future, and thanking Saunders for his attention.

On October 21, 1879, Saunders writes to Kemp Battle, then president of the University of North Carolina, regretting that the University has entered the political arena by allowing Professor Gorge T. Winston to criticize Governor Thomas Jarvis and himself, as Secretary of State, for allowing the education bill to die in a technical tangle. On October 22 Professor Winston replies, denying any ploitical motives and expressing personal admiration for Saunders and Jarvis.

A letter of December 14, 1885, to William Saunders from his cousin, James E. Saunders, discusses biographical data on General James Hogun and the Hogun family. Another letter from James Saunders, on September 25, 1889, is quite possibly the most important letter in the collection. James Saunders recounts tales from his youth about famous historical figures. He tells stories about Elisha Young, Walker Anderson, and Bishop Cicero Hawks; an episode in the life of the Benton brothers, Jesse and Thomas Hart; a story about John J. Crittenden and James C. Dobbins; and one about John Henry Eaton which contains Andrew Jackson, John Coffee, and William Carroll.

In 1889 and 1890 Saunders receives several letters from Kemp Battle on affairs of the University of North Carolina. On September 25, 1889, Battle writes about troubles in appointment procedures and on budget matters. Two letters, March 3 and 5, 1890, from Battle recount more University business and mention plans for setting up an engineering department.

On January 9, 1890, in a letter from William H. S. Burgwyn in Henderson to William J. Peele in Raleigh, the former comments doubtfully upon the prospects of obtaining an endowed chair of history at the University, but suggests the names of Alexander Boyd Andrews and Wharton Jackson Green to fill it. On July 25, 1890, a printed announcement of the newly endowed "Chair of History" totalling $24,600 in subscriptions, is headed by the names of Julian S. Carr and James Grant with $10,000 and $8,000 respectively in donations. A letter from James Saunders on August 11, 1890, comments on Senator Zebulon Vance's political record and expresses hope that Vance will see his way to aid in demolishing high protection.

The last letters of the collection are concerned with the private affairs of William Saunders' sister Anne, and includes a request to Anne by Marshall DeLancey Haywood on June 10, 1893, for a picture of William Saunders to send a publishing house in New York which is preparing a biographical publication of distinguished Americans.

The collection also contains a group of undated financial and genealogical papers, and a scrapbook of newspaper clippings dealing with the career of William L. Saunders. There is a typed copy of an essay on the Baker family by Dr. Simmons Baker, a medical essay, presumably by Dr. Baker, on a fever peculiar to the area of Scotland Neck, N. C.; a receipt book; and a recipe book. Finally, there are some 70 sermons of Joseph Saunders, two papers on the administration of the Episcopal School in Raleigh, and a report (ca. 1831) by Joseph Saunders on his first year of missionary activity in North Carolina.

Among the addresses delivered by Wm. L. Saunders is one entitled "Lessons from Our North Carolina Records," Trinity College Publications, No. 1, 26p. This was read before the faculty and students of Trinity College on Nov. 27, 1888.

A volume that came to the library with the Saunders Papers is cataloged as follows:

North Carolina. Secretary of State

Land Grant Book 23, 1767-1768

Index to Land Grant Book 20 or 23, 1767-1771

The unsigned and undated medical essay noted above is entitled "An Account of the Malignant Tertian Fever." It originated from requests that editor and owner Thomas Henderson, Jr., of the Raleigh Star addressed to leading citizens of the state during 1810-1811 in which he asked for descriptions of their counties. This essay is available in two other sources, one manuscript and one published.

The manuscript source is Dr. Jeremiah Battle's article describing Edgecombe County in 1811. "An Account of the Malignant Tertian Fever" appears without title as the last part of this article by Battle. Battle's manuscript is in Thomas Henderson, Jr.'s Letter Book, 1810-1811, in his papers in the N. C. Department of Archives and History.

Battle's article, including "An Account of the Malignant Tertian Fever," was published as part of A. R. Newsome's "Twelve North Carolina Counties in 1810-1811" in The North Carolina Historical Review, Vol. VI, No. 1 (Jan., 1929), pp. 67-99 (pp. 94-99 contain the text of the "Account").

The author of "An Account of the Malignant

"Tertian Fever" was not Battle but his friend Dr. S. J. Baker. Battle referred to the "Account" in his article as "the subsequent History of the disease obtained from notes taken by my friend Dr. S. J. Baker." Most of the "Account" is printed under quotation marks which suggests that Baker's text was being quoted directly.

The relationship of the manuscript here in the Saunders Papers to the manuscript of Battle's article in the Henderson Papers is unclear. The manuscript in the Henderson Papers, including both Battle's work and the part attributed to Baker, is entirely in one person's handwriting - so the manuscript cannot be Baker's original. The manuscript here in the Saunders Papers is either Baker's original or another copy, perhaps the latter.

"An Account of the Malignant Tertian Fever" actually concerns eastern Halifax County rather than adjacent Edgecombe County. The essay includes: a description of Scotland Neck (the entire neck of land in Halifax County formed by the curvature of Roanoke River), Deep Creek, and Kehukee in eastern Halifax County; the housing and diet of both whites and blacks; the occurrences of malaria among whites and blacks beginning in 1802 but also the effects of fevers upon earlier settlement patterns; symptoms; treatments; and an autopsy of a black man who died from it. The author identifies himself as a doctor in the text.

Saunders & Company. Papers. Phoenix Mines,

Saunders & Company was a general store located at the village of Phoenix Mines. The three volumes are: Daybook, 1853, May-Feb., 1855; Daybook, 1855, Feb.-Sept., and Daybook, 1855, Sept.-Dec., including Miscellaneous Accounts, 1856-1858. It is the Miscellaneous Accounts that contain the name of the firm. In 1856 there are long accounts for B. H. Saunders and A. H. Hutchison who bought goods from Saunders & Co.

There is also a reference to the "estate." Apparently an owner of the store died, the firm ceased, and its property was purchased by others. The accounts are mercantile and contain no indication that the store and mine were connected. There are some entries for purchases by mining companies.

There are two tax listings in 1862 for B. H. Saunders and Nelson Bostz both of which include the names and ages of their slaves. These items were found within the volumes.

According to a North Carolina statute of March 27, 1880, the responsibility for supervising the maintenance of the public roads was vested in the justices of the peace in each township who were incorporated as a board of trustees in each township.

The volume is the Minute Book, 1879-1886 (60 pp.), of the Board of Trustees of Public Roads of Sauratown Township. The business of the meetings usually consisted of the

Savannah Port Papers
Savannah, Georgia

Sketch 1754-19²⁰~~18~~
5,595 pieces

This collection contains the official papers of the Port of Savannah, Georgia, in the Governmental Coastal District of Savannah. They are papers of ship clearance, cargo lists, Treasury Department letters and similar papers which deal with the customs operations at the port from 1820 to 1870.

Specifically, there are these papers:

1. Manifests. These are cargo lists of vessels entering or leaving the port.

MAY 30 1942

Savannah Port Papers Sketch (2)

2. Returns of Seamen. These are lists of the crews shipping on the vessels.
3. Import Custom Papers. These are much like manifests, but include an accounting of the customs due on each item.
4. Warehouse Withdrawal Papers. Importers were allowed to place liquors and other articles in bonded warehouses until sold and then pay the duty as they withdrew them from the houses. These are permits to withdraw certain items.
5. Lighthouse Papers. These are contracts for building or repairing lighthouses and for maintaining them, and salary receipts of the lighthouse keepers. These papers are for the Savannah District.

6. Victual and Store Sheets. These are lists of the "Ships' Victuals and Stores of the various vessels.

7. Crew Bonds. These are bonds binding vessel masters to return to port with the same crews with which they ship out, unless some be discharged in foreign ports with permission of the

Savannah Port Papers Sketch (4)

U. S. Consul in that port.

8. British Consular Papers. These are various letters and papers to and from the office of the British Consulate in the Port of Savannah.

9. Salary Receipts of the various United States officials necessary to administer the work of the District of Savannah.

10. Receipts and Disbursement Accounts of ~~the~~ various sorts for the Port of Savannah, District of Savannah.

Of these papers, by far the largest part are manifests, either of a part of the cargo or of the whole cargo. The next largest groups include Returns of Seamen and Import Custom papers, and the other items are in much smaller proportions.

Several interesting observations arise from a study of this collection. One of these concerns the chief items of export from Savannah during the years of this set. The one item which composed the largest part of the export trade was up-land, or short-staple cotton. Most of this went to Liverpool, and the return cargoes consisted largely of iron, steel, and manufactured goods. There was some Sea Island Cotton to export, but not nearly so much of it as of the upland. Two or three manifests, one in 1851, show that often ships came down from Boston and New England with cargoes of ice. The 1851 manifest shows a cargo of 124 tons of ice from Boston to Savannah. Most of the other cargoes from New England consisted mainly of food.

Savannah Port Papers

Two other items occur often in the export manifests from Savannah. One is rice. This commodity formed a part of many cargoes, and quite a few times was the whole cargo. The other item was lumber, notably pine, in the form of boards and shingles. Much of this went to Liverpool, and much of it to Barbados, Havana, and other island ports, but, interestingly enough, a considerable quantity was sent North to New England ports.

Much wine was imported from Madeira and then exported again to European ports, notably Liverpool. The main European ports, incidentally, receiving Savannah exports were Liverpool and Havre. ✓ missing 10/5/2000

One manifest (June 29, 1835) from Baltimore to Savannah is of interest. The manifest is for four Negroes to be sold as slaves, and there is an interesting oath to be signed on the back of the manifest.

Savannah Port Papers also include a telegram (Nov. 10, 1857) and a letter (Nov. 19, 1857) from Howell Cobb while Secretary of the Treasury to John Boston, collector of the port of Savannah. These two items, however, have been transferred to the Howell Cobb collection for convenience in locating them.

Thirty-one pieces added 8-27-42 are of the same general nature.

1084 items and 2 vols. added 6-9-53. These include lists of seamen admitted to the Savannah Poor House and Hospital in the 1820's and 1830's; price current bulletin for Havana of Jan. 11, 1849; land deeds for

Ga.; and papers of the Savannah Port Society, a charitable organization to aid indigent seamen. The latter group of mss. is placed at the end of the collection. One of the vols. (1817-1824) contains lists of returns of goods on a number of ships, and the other vol. is an inspector's returns from 1830-1840.

14 items, 11-14-56, from the Marmaduke Floyd Collection are miscellaneous in character, include hospital and poor house accounts ca. 1830. John Stevens, agent of the Marine

On the outbreak of the Civil War he hastened to organize a company for the Confederate service. He became a major of cavalry and later was Provost Marshall in the Mississippi department. In 1867 he was assistant clerk

The war letters are of interest and value in showing the nature of service in a border area. There is also considerable material for social history, especially during the War. A small volume entitled "War Record" contains list of men who served under Savery. Savery settled in Miss. after the war, and the volumes indicate his place of residence as Baldwyn.

Sawyer, Francis A. and Jonathan. Papers, 1841-1899. Dover, Strafford County, New Hampshire.

Alfred I. Sawyer came from Massachusetts in 1824 to establish a woolen mill on the falls of the Cocheco River at the weaving center of Dover, New Hampshire. Many woolen and cotton materials were woven here. The papers begin in 1841 with a small volume noting bank drafts. They contain the bills, receipts, and business letters of the firm, rather than details of actual manufacture of woolen flannel.

Sawyer, Francis A. and Jonathan

Zenus and Jonathan Sawyer are in Dover, N.H., in the 1850's when their brother, Francis A. Sawyer, writes from Boston. The company bought a large amount of wool in bales to produce red and yellow flannels. They sold this first in Philadelphia and Boston, and later in New York. Prices, chemicals and dyes, and the state of the market are of constant concern. In the 1860's Sawyer Woolen Mills had large contracts for blue flannel for the Union Army. By this time Francis A. and Jonathan are the heads of the company. In 1865 it is noted that wages in the mill were 75¢ a day. Evidently these papers are but a portion of the records of the company.

At the end of the nineteenth century, sons and nephews of F. A. and Jonathan Sawyer are in the business.

There is practically no personal material of any significance. A number of woolen samples appear in the 1890's.

Sawyer, Lemuel. Papers, 1864. Point Lookout, Md. 16 items. Sketch.

These are the letters of Lemuel Sawyer, a Confederate soldier confined in a prison camp at Point Lookout, Md., to his aunt, Mrs. Julia A. Voorhees. There is very little of interest in these papers. He does mention the slow exchange of prisoners going on there in March 1864, the monotony of prison life, and the unlimited confidence among the prisoners in General Lee and his soldiers.

D. Lewis Saxon was the son of Joshua Saxon of Huntington, Laurens Co., S.C. Joshua Saxon had at least one other son, I.F.K. Saxon. The father Joshua, was a very devout Presbyterian and since his son was sent to Erskine College, Saxon was probably an Associate Reformed Presbyterian. In so far as these letters reveal, D. Lewis Saxon was in school at Erskine College from 1850 to '52.

Many of the letters are to and from Lewis Saxon while in school there. Others relating to family affairs are from relatives in Wetumpka, Ala. The collection is of small value.

Scarborough Family. Papers. Mount Gilead,
Montgomery County, North Carolina

The Scarborougs were a family of farmers of Mount Gilead, Montgomery County, North Carolina. A series of men from the family held the job of postmaster at Mount Gilead off and on for a large portion of the years from the establishment of the post office in 1835 to the beginning of the Wilson Administration in 1913. From the 1880's down to 1913, the postmaster at Mount Gilead tended to be a Scarborough whenever the Republicans were in power in Washington. The town's first postmaster was Samuel Scarborough, to whom many of the letters in the collection are addressed, and he served from 1835 to 1850. He was the son of William Scarborough, who settled in the area in 1792. In 1882, John R. Scarborough was appointed postmaster and held the position until 1885. He was returned for the period 1889-1893. With the inauguration of McKinley in 1897, Henry T. Scarborough (1849-1934), whose letters also bulk large in the collection, became postmaster and served until 1913 (Most of the foregoing information was found on an undated item filed in the collection under "Miscellany").

Scarborough Family

The Scarborougs appear to have been fairly prominent members of their small community. John R. Scarborough is mentioned in Branson's North Carolina Business Directory of 1896 as a magistrate for Mount Gilead Township. Some of the collection's legal papers from the 1870's to the 1890's reveal that H. M. Scarborough was a Justice of the Peace during this period. In addition, several of the vols.

indicate that Henry T. Scarborough was a Justice of the Peace during the years from 1898 to 1911. There seems to be no biographical information on the family available outside the collection itself.

The major portions of the collection are correspondence, legal papers, financial papers, and volumes. There are also small amounts of printed material, clippings, pictures and invitations, genealogy, and miscellany.

The correspondence, the highlight of the collection, is thickest for the periods

1832-1874 and 1914-1933. There are relatively few letters or copies of letters written by members of the immediate family, unless they happened to be away from home for a time. The vast majority of the letters are from friends and relatives addressed to the family at Mount Gilead.

In many of the letters from the 1830's through the 1880's, one can see clear evidence of the westward movement of American agriculture. Many of the Scarborroughs' relatives and friends moved from North Carolina to such states as Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Mississippi, and Arkansas during the decades of the 1830's through the 1850's. In the 1870's and 1880's, there are letters from people who moved to the frontier areas of that period such as Texas and Kansas.

The correspondence is probably most valuable for its portrayal of the lives of Southern farmers from the 1830's to the end of the century. Descriptions of various agricultural areas, crop yields and crop prices, and land transactions and land prices are among the economic topics these letters discuss. Political opinions on nullification, slavery, and Reconstruction are sometimes expressed in pointed terms. Accounts of religious events, such as revivals, and expressions of religious opinions are plentiful. Much information on attitudes, customs, and social life--including from the woman's point of view--could be gathered from the correspondence of these years, as well as much purely family gossip regarding births, marriages, deaths, and sickness. An additional advantage of these letters is that they come from a rather wide variety of areas scattered all across the South, with those from central and southeastern Alabama, Madison County, Tennessee, central Georgia, and Denton County, Texas, being the most plentiful. The letters tend to be long and usually summarize several months' or a year's experiences. The nineteenth-century correspondence, in sum, provides information that could contribute to a social and economic history of Southern agriculture before 1900.

Aside from the information on farming and

the frontier, the nineteenth-century correspondence also sheds light on certain special aspects of the period. There is one letter (1847, April 10) from a North Carolina volunteer in the American Army in the Mexican War which contains a description of his impressions of Mexico, although he does not seem to have been in the fighting. The correspondence from the Civil War period is abundant. There are many letters from Confederate soldiers, mainly from Franklin Scarborough, a private in the 44th North Carolina Regiment. His letters contain much information on camp life, although due to a heart condition and an eye ailment he was not in any battles. The other side of the Civil War in the South--the home front--is presented rather well in the letters from home written to Frank and in the letters sent to Mount Gilead from other parts of the South.

In addition, the correspondence prior to 1900 includes several letters, some of which are excellent, from students at various colleges, especially Davenport Female College in Lenoir, North Carolina, and Davidson College,

North Carolina.

The twentieth-century correspondence concentrates on the period 1914 to 1933 and concerns for the most part family gossip, minor business matters, and genealogy of the Scarborough family. The writers of letters from this period are in most cases residents of North Carolina. The most interesting portion of the twentieth-century letters are those written during the latter part of World War I to Sam P. Scarborough, a private in the 55th Pioneer Infantry Regiment of the U.S. Army, by his family and friends. These letters reveal much about the civilian view of the war and the demobilization. Unfortunately no significant letters home from Sam are contained in the collection. In the early 1920's, there are several good letters from J. B. Scarborough, who received a Ph.D. in mathematics from Johns Hopkins and went on to become a professor at the U. S. Naval Academy. His letters usually include observations on national politics and on life at the Academy.

The fairly abundant set of legal papers consists of many deeds and summonses, and some wills, land grants, reports on local election results, sheriff's reports to the state treasurer on tax collections, and inventories of estates. The legal papers deal almost exclusively with affairs in Montgomery County, North Carolina, and are centered on the nineteenth century, although some extend backward into the late eighteenth and forward into the early twentieth centuries.

The financial papers cover the period 1760-1917 and are mainly bills and receipts having to do with sales and purchases relating to the farm. Some of the financial papers are accounts, stock share certificates, and lists of debts.

The small amount of printed material includes some Republican campaign material from the 1920's and 1932, and several programs, such as one for a national postmaster's convention in 1932. The clippings all come from newspapers and are for the most part poems and articles on household hints and home remedies. There is one clipping concerning the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Henry

T. Scarborough. The genealogy consists of a fair amount of material collected in the early 1920's by Henry T. Scarborough, who was planning a book on the history of the Scarborough family but never completed it. The collection also includes several invitations, Christmas cards, and a couple of membership cards for the National Republican League dated 1923 (Miscellany). There are several undated, unlabeled photographs, the most interesting ones being four copies of a family portrait, probably of the Scarborough family, taken on the front porch of an old house. The miscellany contains a variety of materials: some hand-written verses, perhaps for an original song; some hand-written essays on various subjects; some notes and fragmentary writings on the history of Montgomery County; several ballots for various elections; and a report on North Carolina's cotton crop of 1930.

Rounding out the collection are twenty-three volumes containing various types of information. The Notes on Family History Compiled by Henry T. Scarborough, 1915-1922, is almost entirely filled with genealogical material such as lists of family members and brief paragraphs on family history. It also includes a copy of a letter regarding a settlement of a deceased relative's estate and some financial accounts concerning the same estate.

Four of the volumes concern teaching, including two public school registers. The earlier register apparently belonged to a teacher named F. B. Bray, whose school was first in District No. 25 of Randolph County, North Carolina, 1881-1883, and then in District No. 62 of Chatham

County, 1885-1887. It contains much data, such as names of pupils and attendance records, names of textbooks, amounts of teachers' salaries, and names of the local school committee, but the records were haphazardly kept. The same type of data and spotty record-keeping are characteristic also of the later register, which was kept during 1894-1900 by several teachers of a school in District No. 46 of Montgomery County, one of its teachers being R. B. Scarboro. Another volume, undated-- a small brown memorandum book--also seems to concern teaching. It consists of lists of words, perhaps spelling words for pupils, plus a couple of recipes. S. E. Scarborough's Account Book, 1867-1886, includes accounts, 1867-1874, from a private school at Mt. Gilead and maybe elsewhere as well as other miscellaneous farm accounts.

Seven of the volumes are Civil and Criminal Dockets for Mt. Gilead Township covering the period 1869 to 1911. Most of them belonged to Justice of the Peace Henry T. Scarborough.

There are seven volumes containing records of financial transactions. Two thin unbound volumes from 1844-1853 and 1854-1861, respectively, record accounts of Samuel Scarborough, many of them for blacksmithing. Henry T. Scarborough's Account Books, 1887-1894, 1896-1900, and 1909-1919, are his personal and farm accounts. They include payments for laborers, but it is unclear whether or not the laborers were also tenants. The accounts for laborers probably include black farm workers. He was also a supervisor for work on the public roads (Account Book, 1909-1919, pp. 252-259). Henry T. Scarborough's Ledger for 1920-1929 contains a few personal accounts for that period. Another volume, the Daybook and Scrapbook, 1803-1926, includes some accounts from 1895-1913 among various other kinds of information such as clippings and copies of deeds and letters.

20a

Finally, there are four small volumes containing notations, two of these--the ones from 1911 and 1927--are just typical memorandum books filled with scribbled notes--lists of names and figures usually without any obvious reference. The third memorandum book comes from 1920-1921 and has the same kind of notations, but the printed pages are an extensive advertisement for Columbia Fertilizers. The collection's last volume is labeled "Ledger" and dates from about 1916. Among its several different kinds of notes are lists of voters and some financial accounts. There are also many receipts and a number of clippings on politics glued or clipped in the volume.

Schaum, William. Papers. Lancaster,
Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania

William Schaum (b. 1840) was a resident of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, who enlisted in the 122d Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, a nine-months regiment, in August, 1862, rose to the rank of corporal a month later, and was mustered out with his company in May, 1863. In April, 1864, he reenlisted as a private in the 79th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, a three-years regiment which had become a Veteran Volunteer unit. He was discharged in July, 1865, as part of the general demobilization.

Schaum, William

Researchers working with the Schaum material may wish to consult Samuel P. Bates' History Of Pennsylvania Volunteers, Vols. 3 & 4, for lists of personnel and brief histories of the 79th and 122d Pa. Vols., and the Official Atlas of the Civil War, plates 79, 80, and 120, for maps showing relevant areas.

The Schaum collection consist of four items: two small volumes of a diary which is primarily concerned with the period January 20-April 28, 1865, a tintype of Schaum in the uniform of a corporal of the 122d Pa. Vols., and a clipping.

Schaum's diary covers his service with Sherman's forces during their campaign north from Savannah, Georgia, into North Carolina. During the campaign, Schaum remained on the rolls of the 79th Pa. Vols., but he was actually detailed to service as a wagondriver with the Quartermaster's Department of his regiment's parent brigade, the 3d Brigade, 1st Division, 14th Army Corps.

Schaum's rank, job, and physical location in the army did not permit him to be aware of all the major events of Sherman's Carolinas Campaign. Sherman's army advanced in from two to five separate columns at any given time, and Schaum's duties with the wagons kept him out of the thick of any fight involving his column. The chief events of the march he had some knowledge of and recorded reactions to were the battles of Averasboro (March 16, 1865) and Bentonville, N.C. (March 19-21, 1865),

the capture of Fayetteville and Raleigh, N.C., and Johnston's surrender at the Bennett House, Durham Station, N.C.

By far the bulk of the diary is devoted to the monotonous daily details of an army on an extended march: the breaking of camp, the waiting to start, the state of the weather, the condition of the roads, the number of miles covered before and after lunch, and the establishment of a new camp at a new locale which may or may not have a name which the diarist might record. His January 30, 1865, entry relates how several men working on a road near Savannah were severely injured by the explosion of "tar peters", which turn out to be torpedoes, or land mines. "Race" is occasionally used for "chase", "the" and "they" used interchangeably, and so forth.

Despite the difficulties, the diary offers some insight into the army and the war. At least two incidents indicate that Sherman's cavalry was not above stealing remount horses from their own infantry. From his vantage point with the supply train, Schaum regularly reported on the confiscation of horses and other civilian property by the forage details sent out for supplies. The difficult transportation conditions amid bad roads, numerous rivers, etc., led to many entries describing the construction and corduroy repair of roads, the crossing of streams by the pontoons of Sherman's bridge train, and the descriptions of the labors of wagon trains to transport supplies and keep up with the army. In the early part of the campaign, supply was eased as boats were used to deliver supplies upriver from Savannah. Access to water communications at Savannah and at Fayetteville also seems to explain the frequency of mail deliveries for much of the campaign. There is some discussion of chaplains, medical and sanitary affairs (in connection with the battle of Bentonville), and some indication of difficulties with discipline at the very end of the war.

Schaum, William

Schaum provided some examples of how he and his fellows got along with blacks. He recorded rumors going about camp, several recipes for pastry, and the lyrics of one song "Red, White, & Blue."

Cities and towns, or rather the damage done them, described include Springfield, Ga., Robertsville, S.C., Fayetteville, N.C., and Raleigh, N.C. In the case of the last two, Schaum attributed the destruction to the Confederates. The diarist offered only the briefest glimpse of his senior commanders.

Flyleaf notes offer some fragmentary information of Schaum's family, including his brother Henry, who had served in the 122d. Pa. Vols. An undated entry near the end of volume one is an account of what apparently was a small interracial brawl which took place in postwar Lancaster.

A clipping is a brief obituary notice for Henry Schaum.

Scheetz was a private in the Union army. These letters cover his departure from home, his passage through Harrisburg and Washington, and a forced march in pursuit of a Confederate force near Harpers Ferry. Scheetz describes his journey, his impressions of Washington, and of northern Virginia, and comments generally on camp life and rations. Scheetz had a very limited education, but nevertheless described his activities in considerable detail.

Schenck, H. F. Papers. Cleveland Co., N.C.

Schenck was president of the Cleveland Cotton Mills. The letter books concern business operations.

Major H. F. Schenck's grandfather and Absalom Warlick built an early textile mill near Lincolnton in 1812. In the mid-1870's Major Schenck built a factory on Knob Creek six miles north of Double Shoals in Cleveland County at a place that became known as Cleveland Mills. In 1888 a second factory was built about two miles south of Cleveland Mills at a place named Lawndale. This information and a picture of the factory at Cleveland Mills is in Lee B. Weathers' The Living Past of Cleveland County, a History (Shelby, N. C., 1956). There is a biographical sketch of Schenck in Eminent and Representative Men of the Carolinas, Vol. II, pp. 494-496.

The correspondence in these letter books is so extensive it should be quite useful and valuable.

3 vols. added, 3-6-78: These three volumes, previously cataloged as Cleveland Cotton Mill Cotton House Accounts, belong to the factories, but it is unclear whether the accounts represent Mill No. 1, Mill No. 2, or both of them. The main office was at Cleveland Mills. Cotton Accounts, 1890-1895, includes: cotton purchases at Mill No. 2, 1890; Mill No. 2's cash account, 1892-1894; Cotton Houses 4, 5, & 6, accounts, 1890-1891; and other records. England

The following biographical information about
General Sir Albert Houtum-Schindler (1846-1916), K.C.I.E., was printed in The Geographical Journal, Vol. XLVIII (July - Dec., 1916), p.
179:

"We regret to record the death of Sir Albert Houtum-Schindler, known to a limited circle of Oriental students as one of the best modern authorities on Persia, its people and literature, to which country the whole of his active

Schindler, Sir Albert Houtum-

career was devoted. He had been a Fellow of this Society for twenty-five years and had contributed occasionally to its Journal, besides being responsible for one of its extra Publications entitled 'Eastern Persian Irak,' published in 1896. Born in Holland in 1846, he completed his education at Leipzig University, and took up engineering as a profession. Going out to Persia he became inspector of telegraphs in that country, and subsequently undertook the reorganization of the Persian army, receiving from the Shah the rank of General and other honours, including the Order of the Sun of the First Class. After leaving the Persian service he lived a more or less retired life in this country, first near Wimbledon, latterly at Fenstanton in Huntingdonshire, where he died on June 15 last."

The collection consists mostly of letters from George Nathaniel Curzon, First Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, to General Schindler, 1890-1912, and includes one memorandum written by the latter in 1889. During 1889-1890 Curzon traveled in Persia, and soon thereafter he published Persia and the Persian Question (London, 1892). In the preface (p. xii) of this work he gave the first acknowledgment for assistance to General Schindler who was then an adviser to the Imperial Bank of Persia in Teheran. Many of the letters concern the composition of this book and include many details about it.

In 1891 Curzon became under secretary at the India office, a fact that gives emphasis to another theme of the correspondence - the relations among Britain, Persia, and Russia.

The draft memorandum (15 pp.) of January, 1889, has several major topics: the opening of the Karun River to commerce; the Russian consular office at Meshed; the boundary problem with the Russians in northeastern Persia; and internal improvements. In a letter of April 27, 1965, L. Houtum-Schindler stated that General Schindler wrote the memorandum for use by Curzon in the House of Lords; however, he was then in the House of Commons. In 1890 Curzon wrote an article about the Karun River region that was published in the Proceedings of

The Royal Geographical Society, Vol. XII (1890), pp. 509-532.

For some time Curzon was associated with the Persian Bank Mining Rights Corporation, Limited, and its operations in Persia are also mentioned in a number of letters. Schindler was the firm's principal adviser in Teheran. The Imperial Bank of Persia is noted once (Letter of Feb. 4, 1894). This bank had monopoly mining rights to previously uncaded deposits of iron, copper, lead, mercury, coal, petroleum, manganese, borax, and asbestos, and the Mining Rights Corporation was formed in 1890 to exploit them. See Lord Curzon's Persia, Vol. II, pp. 513-514.

Two miscellaneous manuscripts came with the Schindler Papers and were in the possession of L. Houtum-Schindler in 1965. There is a letter of introduction, Sept. 19, 1896, from Pope Leo XIII to the Shah of Persia for Francesco Lesné, titular archbishop of Philippopoli and apostolic delegate. Lesné became the administrator of the Diocese of Ispahan. There is also an undated copy of a document in which the King of France, probably Louis XV, ordered the release of a prisoner from the Bastille.

Schindler, Sir Albert Houtum-

There is one letter written by Lady Curzon in 1911. Hussein Khan, whose letter is dated 1909, may have been the person of that name who was secretary to the Persian legation in London a few years earlier.

Miscellaneous topics and persons mentioned include: Henry Walter Bellew (letter of Nov. 2, 1891); Samuel Greene Wheeler Benjamin (Sept. 12, 1891); Isabella Lucy (Bird) Bishop (Sept. 12, Nov. 2, 1891); the Chitral Campaign in India

(June 18, 1895); the Welsh Church Bill (June 18, 1895); Harry De Windt (Sept. 12, 1891); Prince Dolgorouki (1889, Jan.); Sir Henry Mortimer Durand (May 28, 1894); Sir Robert John Kennedy (Sept. 17, 1891); Prince Nazem el Molk Mirza Malcom-Khan, Persian envoy to Britain (May 28, 1891); Sir Frank Cavendish Lascelles (Nov. 2, 1891; May 28, 1894); Sir William Ouseley (Oct. 12, 1891); the Royal Geographical Society (Feb. 4, 1894; Feb. 24, 1896; and others); Charles Edward Stewart (Nov. 4, 1893); and Sir Henry Drummond Charles Wolff

Schindler, Sir Albert Houtum-

(Jan., 1889; May 28, July 12, 28, 1891). The correspondence covers parts of the reigns of two Shahs: Nasir ad-Din (d. 1896) and Muzaffar ad-Din.

There is some material about Schindler's interest in Kurdish affairs at the International Society Kurdistan et Amsteldijk 8, Amsterdam-z, The Netherlands.

In the biography of Lord Curzon in the Dictionary of National Biography it is stated: "His [Curzon's] Persian book, for instance, constitutes even to-day the most comprehensive textbook yet written upon that country. It may be true that much of its practical value and accuracy was due to the collaboration of (Sir) A. Houtum-Schindler . . ."

Schnadhorst, Francis. Papers, 1881-1886.
Woodford Green, County Essex, England.

Francis Schnadhorst (1840-1900) was a prominent political organizer in the British Liberal Party. In 1873 he became secretary of the Birmingham Liberal Association, and four years later he was secretary to the National Liberal Federation that he helped to establish. This central organization of the party was an important factor in its political life. Before Schnadhorst retired in 1893, he served as chief organizer and adviser of the party, 1885-1892.

The miscellaneous letters to Schnadhorst in this collection relate to routine political activities during the 1880's and to the election of 1886. Several non-political letters concern John Bright, British statesman.

Five letters of June, 1886, involve the parliamentary elections that begin on July 1. George Howell, labor leader and author, expects to be reelected from London despite the dissension that he has found in the metropolis. He also comments upon a sizeable testimonial contribution that has been given him. Alexander Hargreaves Brown, M. P. from Shropshire, reports from Galashiels, Scotland, that Gladstone should win a seat in this district. Brown believes that a visit by John Morley, prominent Liberal politician, would be very helpful. Plans for speaking engagements and constituency campaigns are noted in three letters from: Arnold Morley, patronage secretary and chief Liberal whip; Edward Majoribanks, M. P. for County Berwick, Scotland; and William Tuckwell, clergyman and author.

Seven letters from prominent politicians concern political activities in various constituencies. On August 8, 1884, Anthony John Mundella, member of the Privy Council, insists that the Liberals should make a strong effort in Sheffield, and he suggests that the National Liberal Federation hold its next meeting there. The Tories are wise in choosing Sheffield for a central meeting place, he contends, because it is the key to the Southwest Riding of Yorkshire. On May 11, 1885, John Morley approves of a proposed meeting as long as Gladstone will be present. The meeting at the Aquarium in May, 1883, with Gladstone in attendance was a great success, and this occasion should be more triumphant. Letters that concern individual participation at political meetings are from: Hugh Culling Eardley Childers (Sept. 28, 1886); the Earl of Rosebery (Nov. 22, 1881); Sir George Osborne Morgan, Judge Advocate General (July 28, 1884); Herbert Gladstone (Oct. 7, 1886); and Joseph Chamberlain (Sept. 10, ____).

The one letter by Schnadhorst in this collection is a personal note to Robert Arundell Hudson on May 20, 1885. At an early age Hudson joined the office of the National Liberal Federation, and in 1886 he becomes its assistant secretary.

Four letters of 1882-1883 relate to John Bright, British statesman. On Sept. 22, 1883, Bright asks for copies of his installation address as rector of the University of Glasgow in March. On Aug. 12, 1882, Francis Montague Holl, painter, reports to Robert Hudson that Bright's portrait is being sent to the office of the

National Liberal Federation. In July, 1882, Schnadhorst seeks estimates for a statue of Bright, and the replies of two prominent sculptors are in this collection. Joseph Edgar Boehm notes that Bright sat for a marble bust that he executed for Lord Rosebery. Boehm also made a bust of Gladstone. William Theed comments that he has a model of his marble statue of Gladstone that is in the town hall of Manchester. Theed also has a highly finished marble bust of Gladstone for which this statesman posed. Statues and portraits of Bright and Gladstone are noted at the end of their biographical sketches in the Dictionary of National Biography.

Schnadhorst, Francis.

Letters whose writers are unidentified are those of Feb. 9 and May 3, 1886.

1 item added, 5-1-63. On September 23, 1885, George Jacob Holyoake, cooperator and secularist, notes his recent visit with Schnadhorst. Holyoake then comments on the electoral campaign of 1885. He doubts that he could have been elected from one of the divided boroughs, but he "could have shamed disunion by setting the example of retiring in favour of the strongest." "Being one of the working class," he "could have spoken with an authority greater than any one else."

2 items added, 1-3-67. On Dec. 3, 1881, Joseph Chamberlain related plans for a dinner at which he wanted to introduce various labor leaders of Birmingham and related persons to Henry Broadhurst, M.P.

On Dec. 6, 1887, Lord Rosebery noted his political activity and the coming election at Dundee.

Scholefield, Joshua. Papers, 1832-1841.
Birmingham, England.

Joshua Scholefield (1744-1844) was a banker, merchant, manufacturer, and radical politician from Birmingham, England. During the agitation that preceded the passage of the Reform Bill of 1832, he was vice president of the Political Union. After the Reform Bill came into effect in 1832, he and Thomas Attwood were elected to the House of Commons from Birmingham. He was reelected in 1835, 1837, and 1841.

On December 26, 1832, Scholefield writes a letter of appreciation to his supporters after the success of his electoral campaign for a seat in the House of Commons. Special acknowledgements go to Mr. Muntz (probably George Frederick Muntz, political reformer), chairman of Scholefield's electoral committee, to Thomas Clark, reformer, and to Mr. Knight, secretary of the committee (possibly Henry Knight who became borough treasurer in 1839). Attached to this letter is another of August 11, 1832, in which Scholefield solicits attendance at a campaign meeting on the 15th.

On January 21, 1838, he writes to Joseph Parkes, radical politician, and makes inquiries that may relate to the case for the municipal charter that Birmingham received in that year.

On January 11, 1841, Scholefield asks Thomas Clark Jr. to add S. A. Goddard's name to the committee for Thomas Attwood's testimonial.

On May 28, 1841, Scholefield writes to Clark and comments upon the presentation of petitions in Parliament against the Corn Laws, the imminent vote on Robert Peel's motion against the government, the text of his own motion for June 3 on the alleviation of the condition of the Isaac Schomberg (1714-1780), was educated at Merchant Taylor's School and Trinity College, Cambridge. He was summoned to an examination for a licence in 1747 by the president and censors of the College of Physicians of London. He asks on Mar. 6, 1747, for a delay, as he intends going to Cambridge to secure his "Drs Degree." He evidently refused or failed the College's examination; his practice was interdicted till 1765. In 1751 he commissioned Sir George Lee to test the legality of this decision.

Dr. Robert Taylor (1710-1762), well known London practitioner, reviews the history and conditions of membership in "Our College" for Lee on Nov. 27. The hearing, held Nov. 29, calls forth a summary of statutes, legal acts, and proceedings with a bearing on the case. Evidently Dr. Schomberg was finally made a member of the College of Physicians, as a notice of a meeting in 1773, signed by Edward Gray, is with his papers.

Chantilly, Hanover county, Va. 1810-1910.

Mary Eliza(Fleming)Schooler was the daughter of Mary O. Coleman and Dr. George Fleming, a physician of Chantilly, Hanover county, Va. By a former marriage Mrs. Fleming had two sons, Lewis N. and Robert T. Coleman. Lewis attended Concord Academy, 1847-1849, and later taught at Hanover Academy. Robert attended Jefferson Medical College 1851- —, and practiced medicine in Richmond. Mary Eliza and Sally Fleming were educated at Wartham's Academy, Richmond. Associated with Lewis Coleman at Hanover academy was Samuel Schooler a graduate of the University of Virginia,whom Mary Eliza married in August 1855. Schooler became connected in 1856 with Edge Hill Academy, Caroline county, where he remained for several years. Matilda married Charles Morris, a tobacco planter of comfortable means, before the war. Sally married W. Leroy Brown,who was connected with the University of Georgia after 1865. Malcolm entered business in Lynchburg.

Schooler, Mary Elizabeth (Fleming)

With the outbreak of the war, Robert Coleman and Dr. George Fleming joined the medical corps. Malcolm was on the staff of Gen. Bradley T. Johnson. Samuel Schooler, Leroy Brown, and Vivian Fleming saw active service also.

Malcolm Schooler of the 2nd. Virginia Brigade wrote on May 12, 1863, describing the battle of Chancellorsville and the death of General T.J. Jackson.

On Aug. 8, 1863, Mrs. Fleming ^{wrote} of the despoilation of Fauquier County by the Union Army.

Schooler, Mary Elizabeth (Fleming) 3a

Everything- Negroes, horses, cattle, crops, houses- went before the raiders.

From Charleston, S.C., on Sept. 26, 1863, Sam Schooler described the attack on Ft. Sumter the fall of Fts. Wagner and Gregg, and the artillery duels at this period of the siege of Charleston.

From "Bleak House" May 30, 1864, comes a picture of the passing of Hancock's II Army Corps on the way South after the fighting at Spotsylvania Court House.

General Wade Hampton was evidently a friend of the Schooler and Fleming families. He borrowed Magruder's works from Mrs. Schooler, sent her a plasterer, and finally sent a mule and horses "until they are sent for!"

Robert Coleman wrote from Maryland in July, 1864, with Gen. B.T. Johnson's Brigade. He commented from Sharpsburg, Md., on the conduct of General Gordon's troops at Martinsburg and on General Early's attack on Harper's Ferry, and on the beginning of Early's raid into Pa.

Sam. Schooler and Vincent Fleming are in the lines at Petersburg by July, 1864, when Coleman gives an account of Confederate countermining.

Schooler, Mary Eliza (Fleming)

By March of 1865 the letters reflect the confusion in the Virginia countryside as the civilians suffer severely from depredations by Union Troops. Living near Richmond this suffering deepens as the Union Army moves into the country. A graphic picture of Richmond at the time of the surrender is written on April 12, 1865.

A friend describes New Orleans at the end of the war on July 14, 1865.

The post war adjustments for the Schoolers and their relatives in Virginia were very difficult. The death of Mary Coleman Fleming in 1868 and the marital and financial difficulties of Samuel and Mary E.(Fleming)Schooler made additional burdens.

The later letters are those of the Schooler children. George Fleming Schooler applied for an appointment at the naval academy in 1871. Failing in this, he went to Lynchburg where he attended school, and then entered the office of the Atlantic, Mississippi, and Ohio Railroad.

Schooler, Mary Eliza(Fleming)

Sketch(5)

The death of Malcolm Schooler in 1875 at Aspen Hill Academy and the financial hardships connected with the education of the younger Schooler children cast a gloom over the family.

The collection contains valuable and interesting information. The Flemings were people of education and culture. The letters of the children throw interesting light on the life of the students at the Virginia academies and the University of Virginia. There are interesting comments on Professors Gildersleeve, Minor, and Bledsoe, who were known as teachers and men. The war letters are particularly good as they give a woman's interpretation of the war. There are interesting comments on John Esten Cooke, Hawthorne, and other literary figures. The majority of the figures are written by women and they shed a new and interesting light on domestic, educational, and social conditions in Virginia especially from 1840-1875.

Samuel Schooler's Elementary Treatise on Descriptive Geometry, J.W. Randolph, Richmond, Va. 1859, seems to have been favorably received. (See the advertisement in The Southern Planter, March, 1859.)

The Rev. Edward Scofield, Sr. was a minister, probably Presbyterian, who lived in various places in Indiana and Illinois. He does not seem to be related to the Edward Scofield who served as Gov. of Wis.

This collection consists of 12 personal letters mostly by Scofield and his family. The first, dated May 29, 1840, by Scofield himself, is the best. ✓ He contrasts the role of ministers and their wives in the West with their Eastern counterparts, thereby illuminating an important, Sarah P. Scollay of Middleway, Jefferson County, Virginia, became the guardian of Harriet L. and Mollie N. Scollay, her daughters. Harriet L. Scollay was married by 1867 to Alexander Mason Evans. Mollie married _____ Nelson. Mrs. Scollay was related to John Joseph Hickey whose memorandum book, 1838-1876, states his daughter, Sally Hickey, was a cousin of Harriet L. (Scollay) Nelson.

Mrs. Scollay's account book, 1834-1878, shows sales of wheat from "Middleway," records of purchases for her daughters, notes on their school, list of slaves, and records of wood loads hauled during the Civil War. It is highly probable that Dr. Samuel Scollay began this account book and that his wife [?] Sarah, continued it after his death some time in the 1850's. He refers to Dr. Harry Washington [p. 16, Dr. Henry Washington of Berryville, Clarke County, Va. ?] on Jan. 4, 1842, and to the Shepherds-town and Smithfield Turnpike in 1843.

Letters and Papers, 1845 (1861-

The chief value of this collection lies in the excellent letters written by Irby Goodwin Scott to his father, Irby H. Scott, and to his mother, while serving in the Confederate Army.

Among the letters prior to 1861 there is little of value, some being concerned with family affairs and some with legal affairs connected with the elder Scott's service as administrator of the estates of Giles and John Tompkins. One letter of especial interest, dated Nov. 26, 1857, is concerned with fugitive slaves who had been harbored in the home of Mrs. Giles Tompkins apparently near Eatonton, Ga. After the war period the papers are generally concerned with business matters, one paper being a contract (August 9, 1865) with seventeen freedmen for labor on the farm of Irby H. Scott.

APR 20 1942

Scott, Irby H. Sketch (2)

Letters of Confederate soldiers are seldom so revealing as those written by Irby Goodwin Scott, a member of the 12th Georgia Regiment, composed of many Putnam County boys. Scott's first letter was written from Camp Fairfield near Richmond on June 21, 1861. A month later he began writing from Highland County, Va. but by July 21, 1861 he was in Pocahontas County in the same section. From that point he moved to camp Johnson in Augusta County, Va. in April 1862. From that time until February 1865, his movements included the following successive points: Valley Mills (six miles from Staunton), Va., Winchester, Augusta County Charlottesville, near Charles City, Gordonsville, Fredericksburg, Hagerstown, Md., Burkeville, Va.,

Madison Court House, Orange Court House, Piedmont and the vicinity of Richmond. He was a veteran of many major and minor battles before his apparent death in February, 1865. His last letter is dated February 25, 1865.

Scott, a fairly well educated man, joined the army as a private and had no wish to become an officer, although he later became a lieutenant. He gave his opinion of officers, disliked grumblers, at first yearned to be at home, but later came to prefer the army. He wrote detailed accounts of camp life, described the camp quarters and how they were constructed, described the food and gave accounts of cooking done by the soldiers with special interest on cooking a dew-berry pie. He took exception to a letter from his captain, apparently published in the Countryman of Putnam county, wherein it it was stated that the town boys had fought bravely. That no mention was made of the brave fighting of the country boys of Putnam county caused much ill feeling in Scott's company. He mentioned the praise heaped on the 12th Georgia Regiment for brave fighting and ridiculed the Virginia papers for claiming all the credit.

These two letters were written to a friend, Charlie, while Scott was a student at Davidson College. The first was written while Scott was a Freshman, and shortly after he had emerged from the hazing season. The second reflects the upper-classman attitude of superiority. The letters reflect the low standard of scholarship that prevailed in that period.

Scott, Jacob V. Papers. Chemung, Chemung County, New York

Jacob V. Scott, from Chemung, New York, was the father of four sons who served in the Union Army during the Civil War. The collection consists primarily of letters sent home by one of these sons, Daniel. Most of these are copies or extracts from the originals. They deal with Daniel's movements from the time of his enlistment at Elmira in August, 1862, until his death in battle at Atlanta on August 1, 1864. Also, there is an extract from the letter sent by Daniel's captain to his father telling of his death. Additionally, there is a form filled out by Jacob in 1866 and sent to the Bureau of Military Statistics in Albany recounting the war record of Daniel. The final item is a poem sent by Daniel to his mother which he composed while in the army. The letters reveal the feelings of the soldier toward his God, his family, and his country. Also mentioned frequently are aspects of camp life, such as food, disease, and morale.

Scott, Jacob V.

Scott, Jacob V.

There are brief descriptions of various battles that Daniel was involved in during the Atlanta campaign of 1864, including those at Dallas, Resaca, Tunnel Hill, and Atlanta. The form filled out by Jacob after the war lists the vital information of Daniel's military career as well as the names of his three other sons in the Union Army, one of whom also was killed. The poem is dedicated to Daniel's mother, and it expresses his feelings toward her and toward the war.

Scott, SirJames George, Scrapbooks, 1888-1897.
London, England.

Sir James George Scott (1851-1935) was a British diplomat, colonial administrator, and author. From 1875-1885 he was a war correspondent successively in Malaya, Burma, and Indo-China. In 1886 he was on the Burma Commission, and in 1891 he was superintendent of the Northern Shan States. After leaving the latter post he later returned as superintendent and political officer of the Southern Shan States. In this capacity he served from 1902 until his retirement in 1910. Three times he was a commissioner for delimiting boundaries in Southeast Asia, serving on the Anglo-Siamese Boundary Commission (1889-1890), the Mekong Commission (1894-1896), and the Burma-China Boundary Commission (1898-1900). In 1893-1894 he was chargé d'affaires at Bangkok. After retirement he resided in London, and later near Petworth, Sussex. He had a number of publications on Southeast Asia, usually on Burma.

The scrapbooks primarily concern 1893-1894, when Scott was in the British legation at Bangkok, and 1894-1895, when he was on the Mekong

Commission. The first volume consists of miscellaneous official correspondence. The second volume has some correspondence but is mainly a collection of various invitations, notes, drawings, and other items.

A number of items concern British and French relations with Siam and Scott's role as British representative on the Mekong Commission. Included in Volume I (p. 7) is a parliamentary document of December, 1893 (Siam No. 1, 1893) in which are recorded the protocols signed by France and Britain and a few letters from the

the diplomats involved. In these protocols Britain and France agree to constitute a neutral zone between their Southeast Asian possessions of Burma and Indo-China. The extent of this zone is left for an inquiry on the spot in the region of the Upper Mekong River. The English diplomats at Paris in 1893 are Frederick Temple Hamilton-Temple-Blackwood, First Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, and Sir Edmund Constantine Henry Phipps. On Aug. 23 Phipps reports from Paris on his conversations with the French (I, 7-9). In Oct., 1894, Sir James Scott receives his appointment as the British member of the joint Franco-British boundary commission (I, 2-3). Several telegrams of 1894-1895 contain instructions to Scott from John Wodehouse, First Earl of Kimberley, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (I, 7, 105). The Chinese government also becomes involved. One of the local rulers in the region visited by the commission is under China's suzerainty, and he refuses to cooperate until the arrival of three mandarins dispatched by the Chinese (I, 74-75). At Muong-Sing, Laos, the commissioners meet to begin their investigation. Auguste Jean Marie Pavie and Pierre Lefevre Portalis are French commissioners (II, 46). Before Pavie's arrival at Muong-Sing the British witness an incident with the local ruler that Scott reports to Pavie. It is decided to overlook the matter. Pavie notes that the ruler remains in charge pending a future decision by France and England, the commission's responsibility being one of investigation only (I, 16).

In late 1894 Maurice William Ernest de Bunsen becomes British minister at Bangkok, Scott, Sir James George.

and there are several good letters to Scott on diplomatic subjects (I, Nov., 1894-Sept. 1896; I, 93-95). The Siamese are involved in a dispute with the French over Luang Prabang, a province now in Laos. Lord Kimberley refuses to back up the Siamese position. He does not regard that Siam's integrity or independence is at stake. He urges less strenuous diplomatic pressure on the French and the native ruler. In Dec., 1895, de Bunsen reports in detail on the situation in the territory about Luang Prabang. A few Siamese postmasters still remain

Scott, Sir James George.

despite French protests, but the region is almost totally under the control of native chiefs who are tied to France. De Bunsen regards Luang Prabang as lost to Bangkok. In the Menam basin railroad construction is well under way, and he expects this work will forestall any French actions there. Bickering continues on the frontier, and de Bunsen warns the Siamese government to prevent its provincial officials from supplying the French with causes for complaint. After Britain and France sign a treaty in 1896 to maintain Siam as a buffer state, de Bunsen believes that it is no longer in danger of becoming a French protectorate by a coup de main. The French, however, still continue to take advantage of their extraterritorial rights by indiscriminate registration of Asians as French citizens.

Scott, Sir James George.

Several items concern internal affairs in Siam. On Sept. 1, 1894, G. Rolin-Jacquemyns, a Belgian adviser to Siam's rulers, proposes an extensive judicial reform as a means of strengthening the country internally. His plan is addressed to King Chulalongkorn, Siam's reform monarch, and on Oct. 11 there is a favorable reply from the King (I, 78-81). A series of letters are addressed to Scott by R. H. Thomson, who may be a foreign correspondent for an English newspaper. Thomson reports in detail on the illness of King Chulalongkorn in Nov., 1893 (I, 43-46). He attacks the Siam Free Press, a European newspaper, and Sir Henry Norman, a London editor and traveller, for publications which are aiding the anti-English faction in the Siamese ruling group. Thomson also charges that Edward Henry French, British consul at

Scott, Sir James George.

Bangkok, is too careless in his dealings with Prince Devawongse, chief minister and half brother of the King (I, 47-48, 52-55). There are articles on a criminal trial that was a celebrated case at Bangkok in 1893-1894 (II, 7-8, 12-13). A Siamese provincial official is convicted of murdering a French agent. Siam refuses to relinquish jurisdiction to France, and a joint tribunal of Frenchmen and Siamese try the case. The Siamese dissent from the verdict.

A rather extensive correspondence concerns Robert Laurie Morant, tutor to the Siamese royal family and later an education official in England (I, 26-42). In 1894 Morant quarrels with the Siamese government, and Scott, Rolin-Jacquemyns, and Prince Devawongse are involved. The correspondence does not reflect well on Morant, who eventually loses his post as tutor. He then tries vainly to get a position with the British legation in Bangkok.

Several items relate to China. There is a copy of The London Gazette Extraordinary for Aug. 7, 1894, in which there are copies of a British proclamation of that date and of instructions from Lord Kimberley to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty. These documents concern Britain's statement of neutrality toward the belligerents in the Sino-Japanese War (II, 15). Also available are letters from Alexander Michie, one of the foreign correspondents of The London Times (I, 67-73). Michie visits Bangkok in 1894 and then returns to his post at Tientsin, China. He observes the Chinese naval maneuvers in the Gulf of Pichili (Pohai) and reports on Chinese-Japanese relations. He also mentions the possibility of China becoming an intermediary for Siam.

Burma is the subject of a few items. Six letters* relate to the proposed extension of a railway to the Salween River and to Kunlon on the Chinese border (I, 85-88). A railway now extends from Mandalay to Kunlon via Lashio. Four of the letters are from Robert Miller, whose address is the London office of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, a state imperial line. Miller is seeking financial backing for the extension and is trying to counteract some hostile publicity. For Jan. 13, 1895, there is a copy of a British proclamation of control over Keng Cheng with the letter of compliance from the local ruler (I, 104). See Vol. I, pp. 20-24 for French claims over part of Keng Cheng. Sir William Lee-Warner, Secretary in the Political and Secret Department of the India Office, discusses British relations with the warlike Wa tribes in the Burmese interior in 1897 (I, 104). There are a few comments from a minor official in Lashio in 1894 (I, 97).

Some miscellaneous items of 1893-1896 relate to Sir James Scott: an order from Lord Rosebery to Henry Michael Jones, Minister at Bangkok, Scott, Sir James George.

to give over charge to Scott (I, 76); notice from Lord Kimberley of de Bunsen's appointment to succeed Scott (I, 13); two notes indicating Kimberley's approval of Scott's work at the legation (I, 4-5); the termination of Scott's missions with the Foreign Office in 1895 (I, 77) and in 1896 (I, 83); notice of Mrs. Scott's death and of consultations with the viceroy in India for a position in Asia (1896; I, 103); and items concerning publications (I, 89-90).

Various persons are included in miscellaneous correspondence. For purposes of identification they are: Walter Ralph Durie Beckett, Acting Consul, Bangkok, 1894-1895; Alexander Ross Colquhoun, Far Eastern correspondent of the Times; Prince Damrong, half brother to King Chulalongkorn; Prince Devawongse, Chief Minister of Siam and half brother to the King; Thomas William Rhys Davids, Secretary and Librarian, Royal Asiatic Society; Walter Langley, a private secretary to successive parliamentary under secretaries of state; C. S. Leckie, Danish envoy at Bangkok; James Haldane Stewart Lockhart, British diplomat in China; George Macartney, a British diplomat in Central Asia; George Ernest Morrison, a Far Eastern correspondent of The London Times; Sir Charles John Pearson, M. Whitehead, a bank manager in Hong Kong and a secret correspondent of the Times; T. Fisher Unwin, publisher of Cosmopolis; and Frederick William Verney, Secretary, and later Councillor, of the Siamese legation in London.

Several helpful volumes are: Prince Chula Chakrabongse, Lords of Life (New York, 1960) for Siamese officials and history; Who's Who and Whitaker's Almanack for British officials in Siam and elsewhere; and The History of the Times (London, 1947), Vol. III, for this paper's Far Eastern correspondents.

There are a number of untranslated letters in Siamese and other Southeast Asian languages.

In 1887-1888 the superintendent of the Shan States makes a tour with a military force, the South Shan Column, into the southern part of his territory. Scott assists him and accompanies the tour. There are two drawings from this trip—one of Karen warriors (II, 30) and the other of a chief and his guards watching a sham battle by the South Shan Column in March, 1888 (II, 43). This journey is described in Sir Charles Crosthwaite, The Pacification of Burma (London, 1912).

Greensboro, N. C. Sketch 1016 items

William Lafayette Scott, son of John D. Scott, was born in Guilford Co., N. C., in 1828. He entered the University of N. C. in 1850, distinguished himself as a student and declaimer, and graduated with first distinction in 1854. He taught at the Edgeworth Female Seminary, Greensboro, for two years, 1854-56. After traveling through S. C., Ga., Ala., and Tenn. in an unsuccessful attempt to find a position as school teacher, he read law for a short time in the office of Col. Hill in La Grange, Ga. Early in 1857, however, he returned to Greensboro and entered the law office of his brother, Levi M. Scott.

The letters of Wm. L. Scott during this period describe student life at the University and his activities there; his impressions of Ga., Ala., Tenn., a journey to New York, where he heard Henry Ward Beecher; and the Baltimore convention of 1860. The most interesting and valuable letters are those from Levi who was in the state legislature in 1856, a staunch Whig and a Unionist. He, of course, opposed the election of Buchanan.

SCOTT, Wm. L. -3-

With the outbreak of the Civil War, William Scott raised a company and was commissioned a captain. Evidently of a contentious nature he had difficulty with his fellow officers and he resigned his commission in May 1862. The final break was occasioned, so he said, by the unpopularity of the conscription act. He returned to Greensboro and resumed his law practice. In June 1863 he was made brigadier-general, but whether he saw active service is uncertain from the collection of MSS. (Levi M. Scott was receiver for the sequestration of property in several of the counties around Greensboro during the War. See Confederate Court Records MSS.)

Wm. L. Scott was Mayor of Greensboro from June to Dec. 1865. He supported the election of U. S. Grant as a means of averting civil strife. In 1870 he investigated railroad frauds in North Carolina. He was a candidate for Congress in 1870, but was defeated by James M. Leach. There are a number of excellent letters of this period: June 6, 1870 a draft of an appeal to the Negro voters; July 3 and 18 describes Ku Klux activities and the excitement over the election. In the fall of 1870 he again visited New York where he saw Joseph Jefferson in Rip Van Winkle and heard Henry Ward Beecher and C. F. Deems.

SCOTT, Wm. L. -5-

Scott died in 1872, leaving besides his widow, Ella Penn Scott of Henry Co, Va., whom he married in 1867, two small sons, Clarence and John Penn.

The collection is of particular value because it shows the development and organization of the Whig, the American, and the Republican parties in N. C. and gives an excellent cross section of local politics. It contains letters of C. H.

SCOTT, Wm. L. -6-

Wiley, D. L. Swain, W. H. Battle, K. P. Battle, Jonathan Worth, J. R. McLean, R. M. Pearson, A. W. Tourgee, R. P. Dick, John Pool and Levi M. Scott.

Included are many love letters from Wm. L. Scott to Ella Penn before he married her, and also letters to her from him after their marriage.

Additional Scott letters and literary manuscripts relating largely to his student days at the University of North Carolina and his service in the Confederate Army. An excellent description of life at the College of Charleston in 1847 is given in a letter from a friend.

Correspondents include Eli Washington Caruthers, Francis Lister Hawks, John Kerr, Elisha Mitchell and David L. Swain.

See Wm. G. Harrington, "William Lafayette Scott;..." Duke M. A. thesis (1955).

6 items, added, 10-5-63, from uncatalogued materials, are bills and receipts of various members of the Scott family of Guilford County, 1811-1840.

1 item, added 1-25-65, is a letter* from Col. Zebulon B. Vance of the 26th North Carolina Regiment to William L. Scott, describing the Winfield Scott was born in Dinwiddie county, Virginia., June 13, 1786 and died at West Point, N.Y., May 29, 1866. He was educated at William and Mary, studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1806, and entered the army two years later. In July, 1812, he went to Canada, won the battle at Queenstown, but was later captured. He was exchanged in January, 1813, and was actively engaged at Fort George, Montreal, Chippewa, and Lundy's Lane.

Georgia. It shows that Scott was having difficulty with the federal government. In the other, addressed to Armistead Burt, member of the House of Representatives, Scott suggested an award for the officers who served at Fort Brown, Texas, in May, 1846. Scott also referred to Gen. Taylor's services and was of the opinion that his promotion in rank to Major General was sufficient reward.

Scott Hosiery Mills, Inc. Papers, 1933-1945.
Graham, Alamance County, North Carolina

Scott Hosiery Mills, Inc., manufacturers of ladies' full-fashioned silk hosiery, was incorporated in 1933. Its president was Donnell Everett Scott (1887-1955) whose family had operated a textile factory at Graham since 1888. In that year the Sidney Cotton Mills was incorporated. About 1929 the plant was retooled as a hosiery mill, and it appeared as the Scott Knitting Company in Davison's Textile Blue Book for 1933. In 1935 the firm was listed as the

Scott-Baker Knitting Co., Inc., a name that also appears in the ledger. In the mid-1930's it became Scott Hosiery Mills, Inc., and Davison's listed it in 1940 as a manufacturer of full-fashioned silk hosiery. On May 12, 1945, the owners attested the fair distribution of the corporation's assets. At that time Grabur Silk Mills, Inc., owned one-fourth of the stock, and Sidney Knitting Mills, Inc., owned three-quarters.

The mills are noted in Walter Whitaker,

Centennial History of Alamance County, 1849-1949 (Burlington, 1949), p.171. It is also discussed as part of the biographical sketches of Donnell E. Scott in Who Was Who in America, 1951-1960, and in Hugh Talmage Lefler, History of North Carolina (New York, 1956), IV, 465-466.

For some years Baker-Cammack Textile Corp. of Burlington handled sales and finishing for Scott Hosiery, and a substantial account, 1933-1936, appears for it in the ledger. From 1935-1946 there is a large account for May Hosiery and its successor, May McEwen Kaiser, of Burlington, to whom Scott sold unfinished fabric.

The Manuscript Department also has collections of account books for May Hosiery, Grabur Silk Mills, and Sidney Knitting Mills. The entry of Feb. 1, 1945, in the journal of Sidney Mills records the dissolution of Scott and the purchase by Sidney of Grabur's one-quarter interest. The Sidney Checkbook for 1944-1945 also records the transaction.

The collection includes two documents from

Scriven, George Percival. Papers. Washington,
D. C.

George Percival Scriven, U. S. Army officer, was born in Philadelphia on Feb. 21, 1854, and graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1878. He was transferred to the Signal Corps in 1890 and by 1913 had risen through the ranks to brigadier general and chief signal officer of the army; he retired in Feb., 1917. In 1894 he served as military attaché at the U. S. embassy in Mexico City and in the same post in

Scriven, George Percival

2

Rome from 1894 to 1898. During the Spanish-American War Scriven was chief signal officer of the Department of the Gulf. After the war he served in the American occupation forces, first in Cuba and after that until 1901 in the Philippine Islands. He held several other posts in the Signal Corps; he was a member and later chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. In 1917 he was once more appointed military attaché in Rome and was an observer with the Italian army in the Balkans.

He died in 1940.

This collection contains some correspondence (1896-1916) and miscellany (1894-1928), writings, and printed material. The volumes include diaries, photograph albums, and one scrapbook.

The correspondence file contains a few letters dealing with Scriven's appointment as military attaché in Rome (1898). The rest is largely family letters. The miscellany consists chiefly of clippings and memorabilia of Scriven's work in Rome. There are a number of invitations, calling cards, and dinner menus. Two items relate to the coronation of Nicholas II as tsar of Russia (1896).

Of the diaries, the first (1847) was kept by an ancestor of Scriven, Thomas Swain Scriven, captain of a packet boat, the Princess Alice, on the English Channel. It contains material about shipping and passenger transport on the channel. George P. Scriven kept a diary (1892) while working for the Intercontinental

5

Railway Commission as a surveyor for a railroad through El Salvador. It contains records of his work as well as accounts of his travels across the country. The diary for 1899-1900 concerns his work with the Signal Corps on the island of Panay in the Philippines. The diary for 1900 is largely an account of the American occupation and pacification of the Philippine island of Bohol. Both Philippine diaries include descriptions of the natives and the countryside, but neither contains much material on the Philippine insurrection.

Elizabeth McQuade, Scriven's second wife, kept two diaries, during her travels. The first covers her tour of Spain in 1908 but includes only brief references to points of interest. The second (1926) is an account of an ocean voyage from Montreal to Glasgow.

The scrapbook (1894-1898) includes clippings, a few letters, and memorabilia about Scriven's service as military attaché in Mexico City and in Rome. Among the photograph albums is one containing snapshots of Scriven's visit to the Italian army in Albania in 1917. Another album entitled "Album of Photographs" contains 54 pictures, albumen prints, from Costa Rica during 1895-1900. This dating is based upon photographs of President Soto y Alfaro who held office during those years. The views include the President and his wife, a number of young women, urban and rural scenes, churches, parks, a volcano, Bishop Thiel, coffee growing, etc.

The Album of Photographs of Western Tour

Scriven, George Percival

8 contains 38 photographs from California, Colorado, and Wyoming. The album can be approximately dated from information in photo No. 8 in which a sign on a railroad car reads "Gillespie-Kinports Tours." This firm appears in the New York City directories in 1904. In 1915 they added a partner and became Gillespie-Kinports & Beard. The album thus dates between 1904 and 1914. California scenes include Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Del Monte, Redlands, and Santa Cruz. Colorado scenes include

Cheyenne Wells, Garden of the Gods, Manitou, Silver Plume, Pike's Peak, and Cripple Creek. The Wyoming scenes are in Yellowstone National Park.

1 item added, 12-21-70: Letter of Sept. 18, 1912, from the Manhattan Press Clipping Bureau to Scriven relative to clippings about a General Bragg.

Scruggs, Langhorne. Papers, 1785-1941. Competition (now Chatham), Va. 764 items. Sketch

This collection pertains mostly to Va. and Virginians and contains mostly personal and business letters, legal documents, and bills and receipts. Most of the material pertains to Major Langhorne Scruggs, Competition (now Chatham), Pittsylvania Co., Va., although a good deal pertains to Benjamin E. Scruggs, Lynchburg, Va. Quite a bit of the material also pertains to the Tunstalls about whom more information can be found in the Nannie Whitmell Tunstall and William Tunstall, Jr. Papers, both in this department.

Some items have been transferred from this collection to the William Tunstall, Jr. Papers. Typed copies of some of these items remain in this collection.

Some items have been transferred from this collection to the James M. Whittle Papers in this department. Some items remaining in the Langhorne Scruggs Papers refer to James M. Whittle and his relatives. Two items in the Scruggs collection come from the Slave Sales Papers, Duke Manuscript Department.

Broadly speaking, most of the personal letters and legal papers pertain to Langhorne Scruggs, while most of the items pertaining to the tobacco business and many bills and receipts relate to Benjamin E. Scruggs.

Langhorne Scruggs apparently served for some years (ca. 1840-ca. 1852 ?) as deputy clerk under William H. Tunstall, Clerk (1836-1852), County and Circuit Court, Pittsylvania Co., Va. Scruggs seems to have been elected clerk, as a Whig, ca. 1852, and to have held that position for some years.

Scruggs, Langhorne

Benjamin E. Scruggs appears to have been a Lynchburg tobacconist.

For more information about Langhorne Scruggs see an item of 1867 in the Claude Augustus Swanson Papers in this department.

Benjamin E. Scruggs is mentioned in Rosa Faulkner Yancey, Lynchburg and It's Neighbors (1935), p. 48.

This collection contains genealogical information about the Scruggs, Tunstall, and Reid families.

Names mentioned include Abner Anthony, Jr.;

(1823-); Whitmell P. Tunstall; William Tunstall, Jr.; William H. Tunstall (brother of Whitmell P. Tunstall and son of William Tunstall, Jr.); Albert Waddill; Col. Tarpley White; Col. N. Wilson; Andrew J. Whitehead; B. E. Whitehead; Edgar Whitehead; Fannie I. r?; Whitehead; James Richard Whitehead (1828-1918); Richard Whitehead, Jr.; Victoria Ann Whitehead; Robert F. Wooding; and Thomas H. Wooding.

Subjects mentioned include sickness; death; crops; weather; personal, business, and legal affairs; land sales in Va.; commodity prices in Va.; tobacco sales and prices in Va.; teachers and teaching in Va.; and a Va. State Navigation Lottery of Lynchburg, Campbell Co., Va., in 1827.

A letter of Nov. 13, 1832 mentions U. S. President Andrew Jackson.

A letter of Mar. 6, 1844 mentions the formation of Clay clubs to support the Whig candidate for president, Henry Clay.

A letter of Sept. 7, 1844 mentions James Knox Polk, Democratic candidate for president; George Mifflin Dallas, Democratic candidate for vice-president; and Texas.

11

A letter of Feb. 28, 1845 mentions one Whittle, who may be James M. Whittle, who, in any event, is mentioned elsewhere in this collection. For more information see the James M. Whittle Papers in this department.

Albert Waddill writes on Mar. 16, 1845, mentioning Miles N. Tucker, etc.

William Alexander Spotswood Cabell (1811-1883) writes on Sept. 20, 1845 from his home in Clinton, Miss., to his uncle-in-law, Benjamin E. Scruggs, Lynchburg, mentioning the settlement of the estate of the writer's grandfather in Va., the writer's parents, and other members of his family. The writer's parents are William Syme Cabell (1786-1842) and Elizabeth Dorothea Spotswood (Payne) Cabell (1788-1859). The writer's "Aunt Em" is Emeline S. Cabell (1804-). She married (first), Dec. 17, 1829, in Lynchburg, Benjamin E. Scruggs, who died in Mar., 1855. She married (second), Sept. 2, 1875, in Lynchburg, the Rev. Andrew Hart. See Alexander Brown (1843-1906), The Cabells and Their Kin (1895), pp. 323-324, and elsewhere.

This collection has several yellow sheets of typescript, discussing Negro slave sales in Va.; teachers and teaching in Va.; the hiring of Negro slaves in Va. to work on Confederate fortifications in and around Richmond, in 1862; the Chestnut Grove Academy, Pittsylvania Co., Va.; Confederate Col. William Pannill, Provost Marshal, Petersburg; the Roanoke Navigation Co.; the Battle of Great Bethel (May, 1861); Confederate Col. (later Gen.) John Bankhead Magruder; the Danville Female Academy, Danville, Pittsylvania Co., Va.; Mrs. Patsey Colquhoun's

School, Danville; etc.

James Winston Tankersley writes on Feb. 15, 1846 to Langhorne Scruggs, mentioning "Cousin Powhatan Tucker;" a lottery in St. Louis; etc.

A former Virginian, Robert F. Wooding, writes on Feb. 28, 1846 from Marianna, Fla., to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing conditions in Fla.

William Southworth writes ca. Feb., 1846, discussing iron sales in Lynchburg.

C. H. Richmond writes to Benjamin E. Scruggs on Apr. 6, 1846 ordering one and a half

Scruggs, Langhorne

or two tons of pig iron.

J. Armistead Shelton writes on Apr. 15, 1846 to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing Pulaski Co., Va., etc.

L. [?], D. Tucker (and his partner) writes on June 6, 1846 to Benjamin E. Scruggs, ordering 12 tons of pig kettle iron and five tons of No. 2 iron.

William T. Dickinson writes on June 17, 1846 from Shady Grove, Franklin Co., Va., to Scruggs, stating that he has "Joined the volunteer company thats araising a Henry Court,-

House [Henry Co., Va., to go and slay them Mexicans when called for." "We are to have a big day at Henry Court, House, on the 4.th [July 4, 1846]. A Big Barbacue Balloon Assension &c.
&c. in commemoration of that day. And in honour of the Brilliant achievements of our Troops under Genl. Taylor over the force of Mexico[.]" The writer is apparently referring to Taylor's victorious battles at Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma (May 8 & 9, respectively, 1846).

On July 19, 1846 William Southworth orders

more iron from Benjamin Scruggs. There are other letters from other people to the same effect.

William T. Dickinson writes on Oct. 3, 1846 from Chestnut Grove, Pittsylvania Co., to Langhorne Scruggs, requesting that he assist Lt. Thomas Wooding in mustering his, the writer's, company.

William T. Dickinson writes on Dec. 20, 1846, discussing at length Major Jubal Anderson Early, then a young lawyer of Rocky Mount, Franklin Co., Va.

Scruggs, Langhorne

R. V. Barksdale's letter of Feb. 12, 1847 mentions Dr. Raleigh White.

A letter of May 1, 1847 by George C. Tunstall mentions Clay, presumably Henry Clay, but says more about George Coke Dromgoole (1797-Apr. 27, 1847) (See the George Coke Dromgoole and Richard B. Robinson Papers in this department.) Tunstall mentions the arrival, on the evening of Dromgoole's death, of false news that Bowling, the Whig candidate, was elected to Congress; the subsequent wild celebration of the Whigs; the Whig claim that Dromgoole was an alcoholic; the serious impairment by hard drink, in Tunstall's opinion, of Dromgoole's fine talents during the last year or two; and the prospect of Va.'s being Whig in a few years.

Coleman Doss writes on June 27, 1847 to Langhorne Scruggs, mentioning U. S. Senator Thomas Hart Benton. He discusses Ky. politics in a letter of Aug. 12, 1847.

Coleman Doss writes on Nov. 21, 1847 from Monticello, Wayne Co., Ky., to Langhorne Scruggs, saying, "The Campbellite Church in this Country is in a degraded Condition." He discusses religion, commodity prices in Ky., etc.

M. G. Clark, a lady, writes on Dec. 28, 1847 from Richmond, where she is attending Mrs. Carrington's school, to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing social life and customs in Va., etc. She mentions the addressee's "blues;" the Tunstalls; Decater sic; Whittle; concerts given in Richmond "by the celebrated Herz [perhaps Henri Herz, 1806-1888,];" a visit to the Va. State Capitol in Richmond to see the reception by the Va. Gen. Assembly of Cole Garland for Col. John Garland ?, newly arrived from

Mexico.

Ch. McK. Callaway writes on Jan. 20, 1848 from Theological Seminary, Fairfax Co., Va., to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing his recent visit to Washington, D. C., and particularly the U. S. Congress. He went to a Colonization meeting in the U. S. House of Representatives on Tues. evening, Jan. 18, 1848. A jam-packed crowd heard Henry Clay speak. Callaway heard Henry Stuart Foote of Miss. speak on Jan. 19. On the same day he heard a Whig representative from Miss. speak in the House, where "There was great excitement...on account of Mr. Cone letter deleted; Polk's refusing to give his reasons why he suffered Santa Anna to return to Mexico. It is thought that it will injure him very much."

On Feb. 5, 1848 Langhorne Scruggs' female friend, M. G. Clark, writes to him again from Richmond, again mentioning his melancholy; Va. social life and customs; and Mrs. Carrington's school. Mrs. Carrington again took her students to the State Capitol, this time to see the reception of Gens. James Shields and John Anthony Quitman by the Va. Gen. Assembly.

Jedediah Carter, Jr. writes to Langhorne Scruggs on Feb. 9, 1848. For more information about Carter see the Jedediah Carter, Jr. Papers in this department.

Whitmell P. Tunstall writes on Feb. 17, 1848 from Richmond to Langhorne Scruggs. Tunstall is the son of William H. Tunstall, who is Clerk, Pittsylvania Co., Va., Court (1836-1852). Scruggs apparently is a clerk in the latter's office. The writer served for a time as a Va. State Senator. He says there is no peculiarly interesting news on the Va. Gen.

Scruggs, Langhorne
Assembly.

24

Coleman Ross writes on Mar. 12, 1848 attacking the Campbellite Church and discussing religion.

William A. Corbin writes on Mar. 24, 1848 from Lynchburg to Langhorne Scruggs, mentioning Col. John Garland, "who was in several battles in Mexico." He opines that Lynchburg has more dissipation than all Pittsylvania Co.

James Winston Tankersley, a former Virginian, writes on Apr. 22, 1848 from Prairie Hill, Lowndes Co., Miss. to Langhorne Scruggs,

Scruggs, Langhorne

his cousin, discussing social life and customs in Miss.

Mary A. Swanson writes on May 16, 1848 from Pineville, to her cousin Mrs. Elizabeth F. Finney, Dickinson's Store, Franklin, Va. See the Claude Augustus Swanson and William A. J. Finney Papers, both in this department. Mary A. Swanson states that she is studying at Miss Lucretia A. Wilson's school.

R. V. Barksdale mentions Miss Lucretia A. Wilson in a letter of June 29, 1848.

A letter of Sept. 30, 1848 mentions the Rough and Ready Club, a pro-Taylor political organization; Zachary Taylor; the printing of Gen. Taylor's letters; and Lewis Cass.

Thomas H. Wooding writes on Oct. 4, 1848, discussing the presidential campaign.

Algernon Sidney Buford, Sr. (1826-1911) writes to Langhorne Scruggs, on Nov. 8, 1848, May 3, 1850, Jan. 31 & Nov. 25, 1854, and Jan. 23, 1861; and to Gen. H. H. Hunt on Mar. 10, 1877.

George Washington Cabell (1802-1869), farmer and planter at "Inglewood," near Norwood,

Scruggs, Langhorne

27

Va., writes on Dec. 22, 1848, to his brother-in-law, Benjamin E. Scruggs. The writer is a brother of Emeline S. Cabell (1804-), who married Benjamin E. Scruggs in 1829. Cabell discusses hiring a Negro slave, personal debts, and social life. He mentions his sister, Mrs. Clifford Cabell (1814-1882) née Margaret Couch Anthony, author of Sketches and Recollections of Lynchburg, who married Dr. Clifford Cabell in 1833.

Letters of William A. Corbin written on Apr. 4 and May 12, 1849 mention a cholera epidemic in Montgomery, Ala., travels in that state, Thomas Hamlet Averett, Thomas Stanhope Flournoy, Whig party in Va., Lewis Cass, Thomas Grasty, and the Cumberland Presbyterians, Campbellites, Methodists, and Baptists in south Ala.

Walter Coles, Jr. writes on June 24, 1849 from Robertson's Store, Pittsylvania Co., Va., to Langhorne Scruggs, mentioning a law suit against the administration of John Coles' estate. The writer, a farmer, may be the same man as the addressee of the two letters in the Walter Coles Papers in this department. However, none of the above Coles is to be confused with the Walter Coles (originally Cole, (1839-1892), M.D., who is mentioned in the Miller Alexander Papers in this department.

A letter of July 16, 1849 mentions a Dr. Coles.

There are a number of letters between Aug., 1849, and Aug., 1861, by Lysander Blair Conway.

A letter of Sept. 17, 1849 mentions a mesmerizer.

Sallie B. Markham writes to her cousin Langhorne Scruggs on May 23, 1850. A pencilled

Scruggs , Langhorne

note accompanying the letter states her parentage.

William A. Corbin writes to Langhorne Scruggs on June 10, 1850 from Marion, Perry Co., Ala., discussing the Disciples of Christ and two of that church's ministers, ---- Campbell and Tolbert Fanning (1810-1874). The first may perhaps be Alexander Campbell (1788-1866) or Thomas Campbell (1763-1854). The second is president of Franklin College, Nashville, Tenn. Corbin mentions an article in The Owl attacking him; fights about this; and fines levied against the fighters by the town council.

Corbin writes to Scruggs on Aug. 25, 1850 mentioning politics in Va.; "Our Church," which is presumably the Disciples of Christ; Tolbert Fanning; and the Sons of Temperance in Va.

Thomas Stanhope Flourney writes political letters on Oct. 3, 1850, to James Lyons, John E. Shell, and B. J. Worsham, recommending his fellow Whig, Langhorne Scruggs, for a clerkship on one of the committees of the Va. State Constitutional Convention of 1850-1851.

J. B. Stovall and George H. Gilmer recommend Langhorne Scruggs on Oct. 6, 1850.

A letter of Oct. 27, 1850 mentions John G. Jefferson.

Fleming W. Adams (1828-), a resident of Campbell Co., Va., writes on Dec. 15, 1850 from the University of Va., where he is a student, to Langhorne Scruggs.

A letter of Mar. 8, 1851 discusses Negro slave sales in Ga.; commodity prices in Ga.; and cotton crops in Ga.

James M. Whittle writes on Apr. 16, 1851 to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing the Va. State

Constitutional Convention of 1850-1851, including the issue of counting the slave population in determining the ratios of legislative representation.

A letter of Dec. 12, 1851 mentions George William Summers (1804-1868), U. S. Representative from Va. (1841-1845) and unsuccessful Whig candidate for governor of Va. in 1851; Joseph Johnson (1785-1877), U. S. Representative from Va. (1823-1827; 1835-1841; and 1845-1847) and Governor of Va. (1852-1856); et al.

A letter of Apr. 13, 1852 says that

William A. Corbin married Mary E. Creath, daughter of Bishop Creath of Mo.

Andrew J. Whitehead writes to Langhorne Scruggs on Sept. 24, 1852, relative to the presidential election and Winfield Scott, the unsuccessful Whig candidate.

Col. George Townes, a member of the Va. State House of Delegates, writes on Jan. 5, 1853 from Richmond to Scruggs, stating that the Va. Gen. Assembly was accomplishing little.

A letter of Feb. 14, 1853 discusses social life and customs in Mississippi.

A nephew of Col. Tarpley White, Rawley White Martin, who was later a physician and Confederate Col., writes on Mar. 5, 1853 from the Ridgeway School, Ridgeway, Henry Co., Va., where he is a student, to his friend, Major Langhorne Scruggs. Martin commends the Ridgeway School and mentions its principal, Benjamin Franklin Minor (1812-1868), who was Visitor of the University of Va. (1862-1864) and a sometime member of the Va. Gen. Assembly. Martin mentions the good repute of Mr. ---- Kemper's school in Gordonsville, Orange Co. Va.

Whitmell P. Tunstall writes on May 16, 1853.

A letter of Sept. 20, 1853 says that the time has come in Va. "when merit can be rewarded, and Aristocracy no longer Rules." The writer seems to imply that the addressee, Langhorne Scruggs, was elected clerk of the Circuit and County Court of Pittsylvania Co., Va.

George Wythe Randolph (1818-1867), grandson of Thomas Jefferson, Richmond lawyer, and later Confederate Secretary of War, writes in 1853 to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing legal affairs.

Scruggs, Langhorne

Lysander Blair Conway, a clerk in the Va. State Treasury Office in Richmond and formerly in Pittsylvania Co., writes from Richmond to Langhorne Scruggs on Jan. 16, 1854, mentioning the Va. State House of Delegates.

Va. Gen. Assemblymen Algernon S. Buford and Andrew J. White write on Jan. 31, 1854 from Richmond to Scruggs, discussing legislative matters.

A letter of Feb. 19, 1854 mentions the approaching death of Whitmell P. Tunstall. A pencilled note by Richard Jones Reid, Sr. states that Tunstall died the same day.

Rawley White Martin writes on Mar. 28, 1854 mentioning the two schools he mentioned in his letter of Mar. 5, 1853. He speaks of the Ridgeway School in a letter of May 7, 1854.

A letter of May 20, 1854 mentions Richmond College; Hoge's School (in Pittsylvania Co., Va. ?); the Richmond Examiner; commodity prices in Va.; an explosion in the coal pits fatal to about 20 men; the loss of the iron-laden vessel Harriett; insurance; and Col. Tarpley White.

There is a letter of May 24, 1854 from

Ruth Right which throws some light on the courtship etiquette of the times.

A letter of May 21, 1856 states that Langhorne Scruggs and his brother, Richard W. Scruggs, have joined the Masons.

James Richard Whitehead writes on Sept. 11, 1856 from the Executive Office, Leecompton, Territory of Kan., to Langhorne Scruggs, discussing Kan. affairs. He mentions Judge Leecompte; a Co. of U. S. Dragoons; deserted farms; the proslavery army; and Governor John White Geary (1819-1873) of Kansas. He speaks of trouble being caused by southern filibusters.

Whitehead writes on Sept. 15 & Nov. 14, 1856 about the Kan. situation, discussing troubles caused by Abolitionists; legal affairs; Governor Geary; land speculation in Kan.

A letter of Feb. 14, 1857 mentions Thomas Jellis Kirkpatrick, Jr. See the Charles Minor Blackford, Sr. and Thomas Jellis Kirkpatrick Papers in this department.

Whitehead discusses the Kan. situation on Feb. 19, 1857, mentioning the "Border Ruffians of Missouri"; the Democrats; slave state-free state issue; Judge Lecompte; the Territorial Legislature; the proposed Constitutional Convention; and land speculation in Kan.

A letter of Mar. 8, 1857 mentions Chiswell Dabney. See the Chiswell Dabney, Jr. Papers in this department.

Lysander Blair Conway writes on July 25, 1857 from Richmond to Langhorne Scruggs, mentioning Henry Alexander Wise.

Whitehead writes from Kan. on Aug. 29, 1857. He has made over $4,000.00 in land speculation in Kan. since Feb., 1857.

A letter of Sept. 10, 1857 mentions Isaac Howell Carrington.

Lysander Blair Conway writes on Oct. 8, 1857 about the Va. banks and the panic of 1857.

William H. Tunstall writes on Jan. 6, 1859 about the War of 1812; matrimony; land prices in Va.; slave purchases in Va.; John Letcher; Joshua Reed Giddings; Martin Van Buren; George William Summers; the Richmond Enquirer; the Danville Register; Democrats; the "Americans," i.e., the members of the American, or "Know-Nothing" Party; and the gubernatorial election in Va. in 1859. He attacks Letcher and others as Abolitionists.

Tunstall writes on Mar. 5, 1859, mentioning Gov. Henry A. Wise and the Va. Gen. Assembly.

A letter of May 23, 1859 mentions John Letcher; the Va. gubernatorial election of 1859; and the Knight Templars (of the Freemasons).

A letter of May 31, 1859 denounces the alleged corruption of those who vote for Letcher; and speaks of the election for the U. S. House of Representatives in the Richmond District; Judge John Robertson (1787-1873), U. S. Representative from Va. (1834-1839) and unsuccessful Whig candidate ca. 1859; and the Richmond Whig.

R. V. Lanier writes on June 8, 1859.

A letter of July 8, 1859 mentions the Female Institute, Byhalia, Marshall Co., Miss.; Florence College, Florence, Ala.; and the Holly Springs Female Institute, Holly Springs, Miss.

A letter of Aug. 5, 1857 mentions Walter Coles, Jr.

Langhorne Scruggs marries ca. Aug., 1859.

A letter of Dec. 24, 1859 mentions John Brown (1800-1859), his foray and his execution;

Governor Henry Wise and his message; the Democratic Party; the presidential election of 1860; John Letcher; Stephen Arnold Douglas (1813-1861); William Henry Seward (1801-1872); the Abolitionists; the Va. gubernatorial election in 1859; and South-North relations.

A letter of Apr. 6, 1860 mentions the Holly Springs (Miss.) Female Institute.

William H. Tunstall writes on Feb. 4, 1861 from near Byhalia, Marshall Co., "Republic of Mississippi." The letter discusses personal debts and land sales, but mostly the political situation. He mentions the secession of Miss. and the likelihood of Va.'s secession. He thinks Va. will "lose a great deal more than she'll ever gain, if indeed she can ever gain any thing better than increased taxes and greater facility for having her slaves taken from her without the right to demand [one word deleted, or?, enforce their return... ." He mentions, but does not name "Abolition Presidents." He denounces immigrants; demagogues; Democrats; Whigs who collaborate with Democrats; etc. He says "The whole object of a Southern Confederacy with the Democracy is to give the Southern politicians a chance to be President, and secure the offices." "I have very little doubt that the black Republican party would be much more tolerant towards the Southern Country than the Democracy have been or will be towards the Whigs... ."

Isaac Carrington writes twelve letters to Langhorne Scruggs during the Civil War. Carrington writes to Scruggs on Sept. 8 and Nov. 15, 1861; Mar. 26 & 31, and May 19 & 23, 1862; and Mar. 19, Aug. 24 & 25, Sept. 9 & 29, and

Oct. 18, 1863. His letter of Nov. 15, 1861 mentions A. R. Venable and Robert Stuart Cabell. He says, "If there is one thing utterly impossible, it is that this army can be whipt by any force the yankees can bring against us." His letter of May 19, 1862 mentions Confederate Brig. Gen. Cadmus Marcellus Wilcox. Carrington writes on May 23, 1862 that he is on Wilcox' staff. On Mar. 19, 1863 he mentions his brother, William Allen Carrington (1830-1866), M.D.

William H. Tunstall writes on May 6, 1863 from near Byhalia, Marshall Co., Miss., saying,

"The federals burnt up the larger portion of our little town Byhalia on Saturday evening last [May 2, 1863,....]"

Carrington on Oct. 18, 1863 mentions Gen. Robert E. Lee; James A. Seddon; and the Confederate Adj. Gen.

A letter of Mar. 5, 1877 mentions President Rutherford B. Hayes.

Algernon S. Buford writes to Gen. H. H. Hurt on Mar. 10, 1877.

Col. Thomas Tate Tunstall, Sr. writes to Thomas Tate Tunstall, Jr. in 1878, giving him some philosophical advice.

Charles Martin writes on May 6, 1880 from Hampden-Sidney College to Capt. William M. Tredway, Jr., Chatham (formerly Competition), Pittsylvania Co., Va., discussing an unpleasantness at the Va. Agricultural and Mechanical College, Blacksburg, Montgomery Co., Va. According to the writer, the Board of Visitors of the Va. A. & M. College wanted to convert the school into a military institute; fired two professors, Thomas and Martin himself, for supporting Dr. Charles L. C. Minor, the college president, who was persona non grata to the Visitors; planned at first to put former Gen. Fitzhugh Lee in Minor's place; that they dropped this scheme and put another man in Minor's place; that their military scheme was condemned by the Va. Gen. Assembly; etc. Martin states that Langhorne is now a member of the new Board of Visitors of Va. A. & M. College. Martin asks what Tredway can do with Scruggs to restore him, Martin, to his professorship at Va. A. & M.

Scruggs, Langhorne

Martin writes to Tredway on May 26, 1880, mentioning a Col. Kemper, who is probably Delaware Kemper, Confederate Col. and professor in Hampden-Sidney College. Martin says that as Minor will not be a candidate for president of the Va. A. & M. College, and that as his, Martin's, friends will press him, Martin, to be a candidate, and as no man understands better than he, Martin, the ways of the Va. A. & M., etc.

Beverley Bland Munford writes on Jan. 7, 1886 to Langhorne Scruggs. The writer, a member of the Va. State House of Delegates, discusses legislative affairs.

George Craighead Cabell, U. S. Representative from Va. (1875-1887), writes to Langhorne Scruggs on Mar. 10, 1886, discussing business and legislative affairs. He expresses satisfaction with Dr. Rawley White Martin's appointment as Visitor of the University of Va.

Scruggs, Langhorne

Col. Thomas Tate Tunstall, Sr. writes to Langhorne Scruggs on May 16 & 28, 1888; and Apr. 17 and July 26, 1892.

A printed invitation of July 20, 1891 mentions the Rev. Franklin String-fellow (1840-1913).

Andrew Jackson Montague, Governor of Va.

54

(1902-1906) and U. S. Representative from Va. (1913-1937), writes to Langhorne Scruggs on Jan. 5, 1892, discussing legal affairs; Chiswell Dabney; Judge Whittle, who is probably Stafford Gorman Whittle, later Judge of the Va. State Supreme Court of Appeals.

Col. Thomas Tate Tunstall, Sr. writes to Scruggs on Apr. 7, 1892, mentioning Horace; Patrick Henry Academy, presumably in Va.; Joe Godfrey; his hope for a Democratic president; the First Battle of Bull Run (1861); Wilson Lumpkin; Whitmell P. Tunstall; Tom Hutchenson;

William Rison; and Eliza Rives. He refers to Scruggs' wife and two sons-in-law and daughters.

Tunstall writes to Scruggs on July 26, 1892, mentioning some hopes that Stephen Grover Cleveland would be elected president; and John Warwick Daniel, U. S. Senator from Va. (1887-1910).

A letter of Dec. 8, 1893 discusses Scruggs family genealogy, mentioning Henry A. Wise Scruggs; and the war of 1861-1865.

Edgar Whitehead writes on Feb. 7, 1894, mentioning his brother-in-law, Paul Clement Cabell. He discusses genealogy, the Whiteheads, and the Camdens. See the William Camden Papers and various Whitehead papers in this department. He also mentions Gens. U. S. Grant and Frederick Tracy Dent.

Charles Triplett O'Ferrall, Governor of Va. (1894-1898), writes to Scruggs on May 29, 1895, stating that he would remove the political disabilities of Jerry Hodnett.

A letter of July 31, 1896 mentions politics and the money issue.

The last letter to Scruggs is dated Mar. 5, 1900.

There are some letters of 1939-1941. Names mentioned include Whit Morris, San Antonio, Bexar Co., Tex.; and Richard Jones Reid, Sr., % Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., Durham, N. C.

There are two undated letters to Langhorne Scruggs from George William Dabney, Clerk of Campbell Co., Va., Court from 1845 to 1859. See the Chiswell Dabney, Jr. Papers in this department.

An order of the 101st Regt. Va. Militia, dated Mar. 4, 1845, deals with the election of officers. There are photostatic copies of this and some other items pertaining to the Va. militia.

There are some miscellaneous papers relating to social life; business; politics; and poetry.

Langhorne Scruggs, on Aug. 1, 1852, writes a note, followed by a poem, about his deceased sweetheart, Nilla L. Carter.

George William Dabney writes an undated miscellaneous note to Langhorne Scruggs, mentioning Thomas Jellis Kirkpatrick, Jr.; Abner

Anthony, Jr.; a conveyance of slaves; and personal debts.

A part of the Langhorne Scruggs Papers came from the Don Preston Peters Collection. The rest, save for two items, came from Mrs. Mary Reid of Durham, N. C., widow of the late Richard Jones Reid, Sr., who was an executive in the Durham office of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. As stated above, pencilled notes on some of the manuscripts have been made by Mr. Reid. The Reids were related to the Tunstalls, and this collection contains some of

Scruggs, Langhorne

Scrutton, Robert J. Papers. London, England

Robert J. Scrutton was founder and president of the United Christian Petition Movement that was trying to influence public opinion against the war and the political and economic policies of the British government. Books written by Scrutton during the war are listed in the catalog of the British Museum. Letters, articles, and broadsides of August and September, 1941, concern the work of this organization and its allies. Most of the letters are those between Scrutton and the Duke of Bedford. There is also one from retired Admiral James Vandeleur Creagh. Two broadsides enclosed with the letter of Sept. 19 were issued by the National Peace Council. Response of the peace movement to the Atlantic Charter appears in these papers. Carbon copies of Scrutton's letters to Bedford were made on the reverse sides of publications of the Movement and perhaps of other groups.

* James Wall Scully was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, Feb. 19, 1838. He came to the U. S. at the age of 2, but later returned to Ireland for his preliminary education which he received at St. Kiernan's College, Kilkenny. Subsequently he studied surveying under his father's guidance.

He joined the U. S. army in 1856 and fought with the In- dians on the plains and in the Northwest.

Sketch (2)

At the period at which the letters begin (Nov. 19, 1861), he was serving as clerk to Capt. Alvan Cullom Gillem in the command of Gen'l Geo. Henry Thomas in Kentucky. He saw slight service in the battle of Mill Springs, Ky., and was also present at the battle of Shiloh and the seige of Corinth. His personal reactions to these battles, together with his comments on living conditions, form the chief value of these letters, all of which are addressed to his wife, Mary Ann.

In the last letter of the group (June 30, 1862), he tells of his expectation of being appointed to the regimental Quarter-Master-ship of the 10th Tenn. Infantry. His expeditions were fulfilled and he rose thence the the position of brevet-colonel and aide to Gen'l Thomas. He retired to the regular army in 1865 and was promoted to the rank of Brigadier-Genl. before his death in Atlanta,

The chief value of these letters lies in the fact that they record his personal reactions to the aforementioned battles and his comments on living conditions of the day. They also reveal his personal ambitions in the matter of getting a commission. In several instances he makes derogatory remarks about the Germans of Pennsylvania, referring to them always as "Dutchmen." Also of in-

Seven pieces added to this set are of the same nature as those described above.

(Wilmington, 1883), pp. 9, 70-73 (copies are filed with the papers), and briefly in James Sprunt's Chronicles of the Cape Fear River 1660-1916 (Raleigh, 1916), pp. 576-577.

Ledger A, 1853-1923, records the Society's treasurer's accounts for seventy years. It also includes accounts for the building fund, 1872-1873 (pp. 200-205), and for annual dues, 1874-1875 (pp. 224-227).

A small group of papers, 1903-1921 and undated, includes: scattered reports from the

Seamen's Friend Society of Wilmington 3
secretary and the treasurer and miscellaneous accounts, minutes, a broadside, and other items.
A financial statement of Feb. 6, 1906, includes a picture of the Seamen's Home.

These manuscripts were found among the papers of Alexander Sprunt & Son, Inc. James Sprunt was president of the Seamen's Friend Society.

89 items added, 10-27-75: These letters, legal and financial papers, plats, minutes,
and memoranda are scattered over the years from 1810 to 1963. The Society was established in 1853, but some legal documents concern earlier related legal or legislative matters. The Society acquired the property of the Wilmington Marine Hospital Association that was established in 1835 for the relief of sick and disabled seamen (see copy of the act of incorporation). There are two copies of the Society's original articles of agreement in 1853 and a copy of the legislative act of 1852 that authorized such organizations. Other notable items are: papers on the extension in 1899 of the Society's charter; documents (1903 and undated) about Seddon, James Alexander, Sr. Letters, 1862-1865. Richmond, Henrico Co., Va.

Seddon (1815-1880) was born in Fredericksburg, Va., educated at the U. of Va., and practiced law in Richmond. He served two terms in Congress was a member of the peace convention in 1861, and of the first Confederate Congress. In 1862, he was appointed Confederate Sec. of War, which post he resigned early in 1865, because of criticism.

These three letters are of minor importance, dealing with routine matters. They afford supplementary material on conditions in the Confederacy

Seibert, Henry James, Sr... Papers, 1779 (1820-1885) 1912. Martinsburg and Hedgesville, Va. 16,590 items & 68 vols, Sketch.

Henry James Seibert, Sr. served as executor of some estates and financial agent for some people who had moved to the Mid-West. He was serving as election commissioner in Berkley County in 1848 and seems to have been in the lower house of the Va. General Assembly in 1853 and 1854. He and his wife, Margaret (d. ca. 1854) daughter of Jacob Small, Jr., had at least four sons; H. J. Jr., William Luther, Harrison S., and George; and they may have....

had a daughter named Emma. Henry Seibert, Sr. seems to have been the son of Jacob and Catherine Seibert. A brother, George S., was by 1839 in Ohio. In 1843 his wife wrote that he had stolen some goods and left her and the children. Five years later the steward of the poor house in Richland County, Ohio wrote that George had died and his wife and children were in that poorhouse. The princ

Va., presidential campaign of 1856, domestic slave trading, subscription of money in 1858 for a slave to use in purchasing his freedom, Civil War bounty and pension claims (There is much correspondence between E. S. Troxel, who was clerk of the circuit court of Berkeley co. in the 1860's and 1870's, and claims attorneys in Washington regarding bounty and pension claims of Civil War veterans.), and R. M. T. Hunter in 1856.

The bills, receipts, indentures, court summonses, account sheets, applications for pen-of Great Brit. and Ireland took in their meeting at London in 1849 on slavery; national, state, and county Demo. Party ticket for Berkeley co., W. Va. in 1888.

The bound vols. are largely the ledgers and daybooks of Henry J., Sr. and Wm. J. Seibert, Hexekiah Hedges, and John W. and B. R. Boyd. Henry J. Seibert, Sr. was the trustee of Hexekiah Hedges in 1846.

56 items added 4-2-54. These run from 1832 to 1901, and include letters, principally family; advertisements of lotteries, one of these being the Ky. State Lottery; bills for merchandise; price lists, which include two Price-Current sheets for Baltimore, Mar. 30, 1867 and Jan. 9, 1869; and an advertisement of The Dispatch of Richmond.

The family letters were written from the Midwest and largely concern the following matters: Family news, price of land in Ohio in Nov. 1834, the political affiliation at that time of the governor, legislators, and Congressmen of that state, and the attitude of the Congressmen toward the Second U. S. Bank, commodity prices around Urbana, Ill., in Dec. 1838 and 1840; the Seig, Samuel S. Papers, 1861-1868. Monroe Co., Mo. 2 items. Sketch.

Two personal letters, one by Samuel S. Seig, a Confederate soldier, to his cousin, Mrs. Carrie Davis, on July 25, 1861, about the First Battle of Manassas; and the other by I. [or J.?, F. Sieg, perhaps a cousin of S. S. Seig, to his brother-in-law, James, on Aug. 26, 1866, about Mo. politics.

S. S. Seig gives an excellent description of the Battle of Manassas, its high lights and sidelights. On the way to Manassas Junction, Va., he meets J. T. Harris, sometime U. S. Re-representative from Va.

C. S. Gen. P. T. G. Beauregard had already thrown up breastworks on Bull Run Creek to meet the Union attack, when Seig arrived. The attack by the Army of the Potomac was repulsed and followed by a bayonet charge led by Beauregard in person. U. S. Gen. Winfield Scott is denounced as a traitor.

Seig estimates Union and Confederate casualties and the amount of Union Equipment captured. Along with the Federal prisoners of war were some of the ladies and gentlemen whom Scott had brought, along with nearly all the U. S. Congress, to witness the anticipated Southern defeat. The ladies were run over, so he says, by their own "gallant soldiers" in retreat.

President Jefferson Davis came on the field with 10,000 reinforcements and pursued the enemy nearly to Alexandria. So says Seig, but some of his statements do not square with accepted historical interpretations.

I. [or J.?, F. Sieg on Aug. 26, 1866, discusses his farm in Monroe Co., Mo., and personal affairs. He has a commission to sell E. A.

Pollard's The Lost Cause and expects to make $500 or $600 from the sales when copies of the book arrive.

Mo. has had a great deal of murder in the summer, continues Sieg. A great many ministers have been shot in their churches by the radicals, but the day of the latter in Mo. is almost over.

Seig encloses an address (not included in this collection) to the people of Mo. by the Union Conservative State Convention. He praises Monroe Co. and its people. With only 70 radicals, the county is the most peaceful in the state.

Semans, Mary Duke (Biddle) Trent. Papers, 1859-1958. Durham, N.C. 97 items.

The Trent Papers are a collection of letters from various friends sharing an interest in medical history and the collection of its materials. Among the correspondents are Richard Shyrock, John Fulton, Henry E. Sigerist, Arturo Castiglioni, and Lyman Butterfield.

Josiah Trent, an ancestor of Dr. Trent, was made a deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the Bishop of Arkansas, Robert Paine,

Semans, Mary Duke (Biddle) Trent

in 1859, and by the Bishop of Arkansas, George F. Pierce, in 1869.

After his marriage to Mary Duke Biddle, Dr. Trent began the collection of source materials in medical history, and he wrote many articles on various subjects in that field.

This addition, 10-12-63, of 56 items to the Trent personal papers contains a long correspondence, 1947-1953, between Dr. Chauncey D. Leake, then Dean of the Medical School at the University of Texas, and Josiah and Mary Trent. Dr. Leake transferred this file to Duke through

Semans, Mary Duke (Biddle) Trent

Dr. Davidson in September, 1958, when Dr. Leake became dean of the College of Medicine at Ohio State University. In 1946 Josiah Trent arranged to have Dr. Leake write the last of twelve sketches in a series on the history of yellow fever, a series published in the North Carolina Medical Journal. In these letters the founding of the Journal of the History of Medicine by Henry Schuman is mentioned.

By Oct. 3, 1946, the Trent family had returned to Durham. At this time Ellen Frances Frey is corresponding with Dr. Leake for Dr.

Trent, who has been ill. Leake comments on John Farquhar Fulton on Feb. 5, 1927, as well as Henry Schuman. The correspondence is social in 1947, Josiah Trent referring to Leake's "monthly news letter." On Jan. 6, 1948, Chauncy Leake writes of a reprint of the yellow fever series with additional material on Ashbel Smith of Galveston and the epidemic of 1839. On Feb. 24, Dr. Trent gives his ideas on a residency in diseases of the chest. He receives congratulations on July 7, 1948, on his medical case history of Walt Whitman. Dr. Trent's death is noted on Dec. 13, 1948. Mrs. Mary (Biddle) Trent takes up her husband's work and plans a series of sketches on Dr. William Osler.

On March 24, 1949, Chauncey D. Leake comments on the proposal of Mary (Biddle) Trent to sponsor the Journal of the History of Medicine in memory of Josiah Trent. He reviews the Medical History Association on April 14, 1949. By August Mrs. Trent was asking advice on the publication of Dr. Trent's projected Surgical Classics.

In this addition is the petition of the faculty of the School of Medicine of Duke University, dated Nov. 23, 1949, formally requesting Mrs. Mary (Biddle) Trent that the Trent Medical Collection become a part of the Duke University Medical Library. The members of the committee signing this document were William A. Perlzweig, Wilbert C. Davison, Bayard Carter, Wiley Forbus, Clarence E. Gardner, Jr., Elijah E. Menefee, Jr., and Warner L. Wells, Chairman.

Semelaigne, Rene. Papers, 1926. Paris,
France. 3 items

The three letters of the Dr. Rene Semelaigne Papers concern the centennial of the death of Phillipe Pinel (1755-1826). Dr. Semelaigne as grandnephew of Pinel, French alieniste and physician, had been named to head of the centennary committee of the Medico-Psychological Society, Dr. Henri Colin was the secretary.

An unnamed member of the association of French Military Journalists wrote to Colin, who answered on Dec. 6 and 9, 1926, with information on brief plans for the celebration. He refers to Dr. Semelaigne's writing on Pinel. Evidently the same man wrote to Dr. Semelaigne, who answered in detail on plans for the Centennial at the Sorbonne and on his various writings on Pinel.

Semelaigne, Rene

1 vol. added, 4-9-65

9-1-44

Semmes, Raphael. Papers, 1861-1872. Mobile, Mobile Co., Ala.

The earlier of these two letters expresses Semmes' regret at his inability to attend a meeting of the Southern Historical Society. The second concerns his affiliation with the Choctaw Park Society.

2 items added 4-18-41. One requests the transfer of his son Raphael, Jr. to his command after the fall of Richmond in 1865. The other states his inability to get to Mobile because of the yellow fever.

1 item added 4-19-52. Letter of Semmes, Aug. 10, 1872, written from Mobile to James R. Osgood & Co., asking that they publish his reasons "Why Semmes of the Alabama was not and should not be tried." in the Atlantic Monthly, which had been running a series of articles on this question.

1 item, added. 7-30-63, is a letter by Commander Raphael Semmes, C. S. A. Navy, recently resigned from the U. S. Navy. Semmes, on a trip to New York City to purchase percussion caps and powder for the Confederacy, was seeking Capt. Henry Knox Thatcher, superintendent of repairs to light naval vessels. Thatcher, who remained with the U. S. Navy, later became a rear admiral. The letter is dated Mar. 22, 1861.

Semmes, Raphael

3 items added, 5-13-64, are clippings. One, perhaps from a Baltimore paper, contains a letter reputed to have been written on board the steamer Edinburgh off Queenstown harbor, Oct. 21, 1861. It states that there are a number of Southern ladies aboard who are going to Europe for the duration of the Civil War. The conduct of one is described. The letter also tells how Capt. Semmes made his identity known as one of the passengers.

The other two clippings concern Semmes' career through the Civil War and the plan to erect a bronze statue of him in Mobile.

1 vol. added, 4-9-65, is a short diary of 18 and a fraction of closely written pages kept by Raphael Semmes during the closing months of the Civil War. With the sinking of the Alabama in June, 1864, Semmes spent some time in England, the first page of the diary indicating that on Sept. 28, 1864, he was at Hampstead, near London.

The first pages, as well as a section at the end of the volume, presumably list prize money from the Alabama. On p. 20 he notes his appointment as rear admiral on Feb. 10, 1865; the beginning of his command of the James River Squadron on Feb. 15, 1865; and the assumption of his duties on Feb. 18, 1865. His headquarters were on the ironclad Virginia. This section of the diary is characterized by descriptions of gloomy weather, illness, desertions, exchange of prisoners, and the impending fall of the

Confederacy. With the evacuation of Richmond, Semmes acts upon his orders to destroy his eight ships(see list of these inside the cover of the diary). He seems to have withdrawn with his guns to Manchester and proceeded by rail to Danville, Virginia. His sailors were formed into a naval brigade of artillery on the order of President Davis and the Secretary of the Navy. At Danville, Semmes set up his guns to defend the town and the public supplies. Stragglers from the Confederate Army caused disorders in the countryside. Between April 4 and 12 President Davis, Governor Smith of Virginia, and Generals Lunsford Lindsay Lomax and Henry Harrison Walker were in Danville in this week when the Semmes' brigade was on guard duty.

General Beauregard ordered the Semmes Brigade to march to Greensboro, North Carolina, through the countryside, where disorders and desertion were the order of the day. Public stores were looted amid general plundering.

Semmes gave a good picture of the assembly of Confederate generals at Joseph E. Johnston's headquarters at Greensboro. President Davis and Breckenridge were at Charlotte. Terms of surrender are noted (pp. 30-31). The end comes after a week of waiting. Sherman sends provisions to the Confederate Army. After a parole by U. S. General Hartsuff, Semmes and his men begin the long march home to Alabama. He describes the country in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama at the end of the war.

Semmes, Raphael

Semmes' Diary, Feb. - May, 1865, has been edited by W. Stanley Hoole and published in The Alabama Review, Vol. XXVIII, No. 2 (April, 1975), pp. 129-150.

SEMMES, Thomas Jenkins. Letters. 18~~66~~-1866.
Historical Sketch. New Orleans, Louisiana

Thomas Jenkins Semmes, 1824-1899, cousin of Raphael Semmes, was educated in Georgetown, D.C. (his birthplace) and Harvard Law School. In 1850 he moved to New Orleans and practiced law there. In 1856 he was elected to the La. legislature, and in 1859 became attorney general for La. He took prominent part in the secession convention and in 1862 was sent to the Confederate Senate where he served until the fall of the Confederacy.

Semmes, Thomas J. (2)

After the war he recouped his fortune by assiduous attention to law practice and in later yrs. was a prominent attorney, a member of the law faculty of Tulane Univ. and of the New Orleans School Board.

The letters in this collection cover the War period, and concern the conduct of the war and Confederate legislation. Semmes was apparently a close friend of Alexander H. Stephens who corresponded with him voluminously and frankly.

1 item added 5-13-57: report of conference committee, March 7, 1865, on a C. S. A. Congress bill (H. R. 379), which concerns taxation for 1865.

1861 Included in the collection are letters of June 16-17 in which Raphael Semmes writes from the Sumter at New Orleans to Governor Thomas Moore of Louisiana about the removal of powder that was supposed to supply his ship. A subordinate of Moore replies on June 17. On Sept. 11, 1861, Secretary of the Treasury Memminger writes to Gov. Moore about effecting the circulation of treasury notes

1 item added, 1-29-62: A letter written in the 1890's from T. J. Semmes's brother, Alexander Jenkins Semmes, to a collector who had requested an autograph of the Semmes's cousin, Raphael Semmes.
